Weekend Entertainment

By Bob Ross
Emerald Reporter

There is entertainment for everyone in Eugene this weekend.

The lover of the theater at its best will find "East of Eden" satisfying, which is playing for the last time tonight at the McDonald. "The subject is the only one man has ever used as his theme—the permanent war between good and evil" John Steinbeck wrote concerning his novel, upon which this powerful film is based. The movie version deals only with the last part of the novel; however, it manages to catch the novel's infinite variety of life and clearly sets forth Steinbeck's theme.

Guinness Comedy

Alec Guinness admirers should be present at the Mayflower Sunday to see "The Detective." Joan Greenwood appears opposite Guinness in this witty and brisk comedy filmed in France and England.

For anyone who has been longing to be in prison the Heilig is offering a vicarious experience in the form of a shocking double bill starting Sunday—"Women's Prison" and "Cell 2455, Death Row." "Women's Prison" reveals the real raw truth about man-smuggling inside the prison for women. The story of a major criminal, how he got that way, what he did and what he must do, comprise the material of "Cell 2455, Death Row."

New Western

Opening Saturday at the McDonald is a new western, "A Strange Lady in Town." For some peculiar reason Rork (Dana Andrews) wants to run the strange lady (Greer Garson) out of town. However, the question arises "how can he do this when he cannot even get her out of his mind?" The movie answers this important and timely question.

If this is not western enough, the McKenzie is offering "Four Guns to the Border," the Firs is showing "Bad Day at Black Rock" and "Born to the Saddle," and "The Law vs Billy the Kid" may be seen at the Motor-Vu Drive-In, all on Friday and Saturday.

Eugene is offering three plays this weekend in case anyone is bored with the movies. Described as lacking a plot and abounding in witty dialogue, "Arthur" continues its performances in the University Arena Theater. Another comedy, "My Three Angels," concerning the exploits of three convicts in a French penal colony, is still playing at the Very Little Theater.

Eugene high school has distinguished itself in the field of high school dramatics by some creditable productions in the past. Their latest play is "The Heiress" produced by the Thespians in the school's Little Theater. This is the first time the Broadway success has been produced locally. Playing Friday and Saturday nights, it tells the tragic story of a girl whose life is dominated by her demanding father.
