

Raft Wallows in Pacific

THE RAFT LEHI II, wallows in rough seas 56 miles off the Monterey, Calif., coast early May 2 as a crew of a Coast Guard cutter attempts to make a line fast. The raft's skipper DeVere Baker, and crew of four had set out to drift from San Francisco to Hawaii on wind and ocean currents April 29. The Coast Guard took a dim view of the attempted drifting trip, pointing out that both the Lehi I last year in a five-day voyage and the Lehi II in three days never went anywhere except south along the California coast. Portland Man Confesses To Food Chain Extortion

PORTLAND (AP)—A 26-year-old man gave himself up to police for questioning Tuesday, and six hours later was charged with attempting to extort $10,000 from a local food chain store.

Police Chief James Purcell identified him as Glenn Colgan, 26, an unemployed truck driver.

The chief said he admitted threatening to bomb one of the stores of the Fred Meyer, Inc., chain Monday unless $10,000 were left in a package in a farm field on the outskirts of Portland.

The package was left there, and Colgan managed to pick it up and get away from watching police, but he got no money, Purcell said. The package contained only worthless paper.

Tried to Explain

Police said Colgan, who had served 30 days once for purse-snatching, feared one of the police had seen him at the scene. So he walked into the station Tuesday to try to explain away his presence, Purcell said.

That proved difficult to do after Colgan's hands glowed when they were put under a special light, detectives said. They explained that the package had been treated with a chemical substance designed to mark the person who picked it up.

At first Colgan said he had run out of gas beside the farm field, and later added that his small son had picked up a package that they took home and burned when they found it contained only paper, detectives said.

But the son's hands showed no evidence of having handled the package, and Colgan later said he was the one who took the package, and then went on to say he also had telephoned the bomb threat to the store chain, Purcell said.

It was the latest in a series of real and fake bomb threats in Portland, stemming from the mid-April bombing of a department store in a $50,000 extortion attempt.

UO Rally Squad Petitions Due Soon

Rally board is now calling for petitions for yell dukes and rally girls. Regular ASUO forms are to be used, and it is important for applicants to give good suggestions.

The petitions are due at 5 p.m. May 16. Preliminary tryouts will be held May 17 in Gerlinger annex.

Candidates for rally girls will try out to the Oregon "Fight Song." All interested are urged to begin practice.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market ran into a flurry of selling late Tuesday, but it held at the lows and managed to stage a slight recovery from the worst.

The decline went to around five points in many areas.

Volume stepped up to an estimated 2,500,000 shares as compared with 2,220,000 shares traded Monday.

The aircrafts and steels were hardest hit of the major divisions with all sections involved in the slide.
