Inspecting Team Praises AFROTC

By Buzz Nelson
Emerald Reporter

The three-man inspecting team from the Air Force headquarters, Montgomery, Ala., had nothing but the highest praise for AFROTC activities at the University of Oregon.

Here Monday and Tuesday for inspection of the local detachment were Colonel Lewis H. Kensinger, Lt. Col. Leo G. Fradenburg and Lt. Col. Ross E. Bodenhamer.

The inspecting officers spent the two days attending classes, interviewing cadets, and observing the administration. On Tuesday they reviewed the cadet wing at the annual spring inspection review.

Col. Kensinger, in charge of the team, stated that class instruction was on a high level and that student participation was good. He also expressed pleasure about the Oregon campus in general and the hospitality that had been extended.

Following the wing review he praised the AFROTC band and the drill team, which went through 15 minutes of special drill for the inspecting team.

Oregon is the fifth Far West school the team has visited. Five more are on the schedule with the next being the University of Portland.

Col. Kensinger, a veteran of 30 years in the service and over six years in AFROTC, has command of 20 units in the Midwest and is trading inspections with the Far West commander. He taught Air Science at Colgate and Cornell in the East and joined AFROTC headquarters when it was taken over by the Air University in 1952.
