

Beginning of 12-Hour Battle

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE Manuel Miller, holding rifle, right, orders W. H. Baumann, Vermont commissioner of public safety, out of his Bethel, Vt., home to prevent the removal of Mrs. Miller, second from right, to a mental institution. Mrs. Miller, 46, had been adjudged insane in Federal Court at Burlington in April as an outgrowth of an indictment charging her with influence young men to evade the draft. This was the beginning of a 12-hour battle which ended when police used tear gas to force Miller to surrender. (AP Wirephoto)

Brussels Chemist To Lecture Here

University of Brussels chemistry professor, I. Prigogine, will present a lecture here May 12 on "New Aspects of the Thermodynamics of Irreversible Processes."

Winner of the $5000 Francoqui scientific prize which is given every three years for distinguished scientific work in Belgium, Prigogine is sponsored by the University lecture committee.

A relatively new discipline which governs all natural phenomena, particularly of living matter, will be his lecture topic.

The scientist recently completed a one-semester course at Harvard university on statistical mechanics.

Democrat States Senators Unsung

Wayne Morse and Richard Neuberger are Oregon's two most unsung heroes, stated Keith Skelton, former Democratic candidate for the state senate, at a meeting of Young Democrats Wednesday in the Student Union.

Skelton charged that the Oregon press and public opinion have not done the two justice. In Washington they are regarded with the utmost esteem by both press and popular opinion, he said. The Washington Post in an editorial referred to Neuberger as "a fresh breeze sweeping the capital's jaded halls."

Concerning the 1956 elections, which Skelton said would make Oregon one of the most exciting places in the United States, he stated the entire Oregon race would revolve around the campaign of Morse. Skelton warned that in 1956 the Democrats will emphasize the Hell's Canyon controversy and the confused actions of the administration, which he said are exemplified in the handling of the Yalta papers and the present Matsu-Quemoy crisis.

Skelton charged further that never in recent years has a President so obviously paid less attention to his responsibilities.

This weekend a delegation of four Young Democrats will attend the Young Democrats' convention in Pendleton. They are Bob Biggs, Jim Archer, Elton Engstrom and Elliot Carlson.
