

Jim Archer Veep of Young Demos; Convention Adopts Radical Moves

Jim Archer, junior in political science, was elected third vice-president of the state Young Democrats Saturday during the Young Democrats convention in Pendleton. Other delegates who attended were Bob Biggs, Elton Engstrom and Elliot Carlson.

Of the 18 resolutions adopted by the YD's, by far the most radical was the "opposition to any form of compulsory military training on college campuses."

Elton Engstrom, sophomore in pre-law, was partly responsible for the introduction and acceptance of two other radical measures, which were: "the fostering of an eventual free world trade," and "a foreign policy based on renunciation of colonialism and totalitarianism."

Local Issues

Among the local issues ratified at the convention were: the creation of a bi-partisan commission to study the reorganization of the structure and administration of Oregon State government, and "condemning of the 1955 session of the Oregon State legislature for its failure to sub-district Lane and Marion counties for the election of state representatives, while at the same time it approved sub-districting for Multnomah county."

The young political group also endorsed the position of Wayne Morse on his foreign policy. Hell's Canyon stand and education proposal.

To Meet Here

A resolution was made that may affect the University of Oregon. It was the acceptance of a Young Democrat College Federation. Because of the different universities' location it was moved that this convention be held here fall or winter term. This would be a supplementary convention to the state YD convention and would consist of a possible 200 students from the 14 Oregon colleges.

Al Ullman, former Democratic candidate for national representative, delivered the keynote speech, while Terry Schunk, Multnomah county sheriff, was the banquet speaker. State Attorney General Robert Thornton was master of ceremonies.

This Wednesday the University Young Democrats will meet at 7 p.m. in the Student Union to nominate permanent officers. All interested students and professors are welcome to attend.
