

Bostic Group to Play In Ballroom Wednesday

The Earl Bostic jazz group will appear in a concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom under the auspices of the SU board.

Bostic, who has enjoyed nationwide popularity among jazz enthusiasts and is currently on a tour of the Pacific Northwest, will have with him his recording group of seven musicians and a vocalist.

Tickets for the concert are still available and may be purchased for 75 cents at the SU main desk or at Thompson's music store in downtown Eugene.

Marshall Is Chief Counsel for NAACP

Thurgood Marshall, chief legal counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will speak at 1 p.m. today in the Student Union ballroom.

Subject of his talk will be segregation.

Since 1938, Marshall has been special counsel for the NAACP. He is in active charge of legal cases to secure and protect full citizenship rights for Negroes.

Marshall has appeared before the U.S. Supreme Court and federal and state courts, particularly in the South. He has argued or prepared briefs in all NAACP cases affecting constitutional rights of Negroes since 1938. He has won 11 of 14 cases in which he has appeared before the supreme court.

Segregation in Schools

His most recent victory was the Court's decision of May 17, 1954, which held that "separate but equal" facilities in education were unconstitutional.

Marshall's other victories include the right of Negroes to vote in primary elections in the South and the right of Negroes traveling between states to be free from local Jim Crow laws.

A graduate of Howard university law school, Marshall was admitted to the Bar in 1933, in Maryland. In 1934, he became legal counsel for the Baltimore City branch of the NAACP. From 1936 until 1938, he served as as-

Bob Summers, 1954-55 ASUO president and a member of the University Assembly committee, deserves considerable credit for the fact that Oregon students will have an opportunity to hear Thurgood Marshall in Tuesday's assembly.

R. D. Horn, chairman of the committee, reported that Summers suggested early in the year that students would be interested in hearing Marshall. Marshall was invited to lecture here, then arranged a speaking tour of the entire West coast, Horn said.

Assistant special counsel for the NAACP. He was appointed full counsel in 1938.

In 1951, Marshall went to Japan and Korea to make a first-hand investigation of court-martial cases involving Negro soldiers.

Marshall holds honorary Doctor of Law degrees from five universities and colleges.

Concert-Lecture Russian in Theme

"An Hour of Russian Songs" will be presented tonight in a recorded concert-lecture by Herbert Bowman, assistant professor of Slavic languages.

The informal discussion and listening session is free and will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the music listening room of the Student Union. Coffee will be served after the program.

Plans are being made for the new high fidelity system to be used for the recordings during the discussion, according to Craig Clark, chairman of the SU recorded music committee.

Final Browsing Talk Wednesday

"Anthony and Cleopatra" is the title of this week's browsing room lecture to be held Wednesday night at 7:30 in the browsing room of the Student Union.

The speaker for the program will be E. C. A. Lesch, professor of English. The discussion leader will be P. W. Souers, head of the English department.

This will be the last browsing room lecture in the series given this year.

Registration Ends For Conference

Registration for the Y-sponsored Seabeck conference, to be held on Hoods Canal this summer, ends this week.

The conference is an interdenominational Pacific Northwest college conference to discuss local, national and international affairs with Christian prospective.

Registration blanks are available at the YWCA or YMCA offices and the fee is $10 until June 1.

Soph Honors Ends Third Year

By Anne Hill

Emerald Assistant News Editor

The Sophomore Honors program will finish its third year on the Oregon campus Thursday with the last comprehensive exam this year.

Two exams, one in history and one in study of society, were given to freshmen and sophomores taking the courses last week. The other two, literature and physical science or biological science, are being given this week.

The Honors program was started at the University fall term of 1952 when only four courses were taught. These four were literature, biological science, physical science and history. Study of society was added to the curriculum the following year.

The top 20 percent of the freshmen class is eligible to take the courses. Sophomores who have not completed 93 hours may also enroll in the program. Customarily, two courses are taken each year.

Lower Division Program

Sophomore Honors is a lower-division program in general education. It is concerned not with specialized training but with the student's cultural growth and the broad foundations of liberal study. Although many colleges have special programs in general education, they are not designed, as the Oregon plan is, for superior students alone.

The program has two main aims. The first is to offer a more stimulating and profitable experience to superior students.

Barbara Wilcox Wins Ad Contest

Barbara Wilcox, junior in speech, won a three-minute advertising speaking contest last weekend which will entitle her to appear at convention in Portland.

Miss Wilcox spoke in the annual Ayres speaking contest sponsored by the Advertising Association of the West. The contest was part of the weekend meeting of District No. 3 which was held in Eugene.

She will speak in the finals at the annual AAW convention in Portland during the last part of June.

Miss Wilcox is head of the Bon Marche College Board and a member of Phi Theta Upsilon.

Druids to Meet, Elect Officers

New members of Druids, junior men's honorary, will meet at 4 p.m. in the Student Union today to organize, and elect officers. Offices to be filled are president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer.

Newly-tapped Druids are Doug Basham, Darrel Brittsan, Bill Mainwaring, Phil McHugh and Don Peck.

Orchestra to Give Concert

The last major group musical event to be sponsored by the school of music this year will be Wednesday evening at 8:15 in the school of music auditorium when the University orchestra will perform.

The program will be presented entirely by students with the exception of Ira Masters, assistant orchestra leader, who will direct the orchestra in two numbers. Nelson Tandoc will lead the orchestra in "Symphony No. 8, Opus 93," by Beethoven.

Audrey Mistrretta is featured contralto soloist in the performance of Saint-Saens' "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Dalila," and Donna Peterson, pianist, will be presented in the concert spot for Schumann's "Soloist for Piano and Orchestra, A Minor, Opus 54."

... CAMPUS AS A BACKGROUND ...

Oreganas to Be Distributed Friday; Feature Innovations In Look, Content

By Anne Ritchey

Emerald Assistant News Editor

The 1955 Oreganas, featuring innovations in both content and appearance, will be ready for distribution Friday. Business Manager Bob McCracken has announced that students need give only their names, and may pick up copies at the Student Union from 8 to 5 Friday.

"With the campus as a background, with the faculty as a guide, students of the University this year evolved a story of '55 . . ." so reads the book's prologue, written by Editor Bob Southwell.

Continuity . . . Cartoons

One of the many elements of continuity expressed within its pages is done through the device of cartoon work, featuring buildings and figures throughout.

Some of the figures are of the symbolic Oregon Duck, others are of individual students and faculty. But they are in each section equally, treading a path, so to speak, across the campus and cross-sectioning all the elements of it.

Silent Historian . . .

From the cover, which has a simple Oregon seal on embossed white leather, to the back of the book stands as a reflection of the campus and a silent historian of the year's events.

Most dramatically showing this purpose is a section called "Campus in Retrospect," where random pictures of campus life, catch characteristic moods of that life and symbolize it.

A new approach to student government, representing it as more than just another activity, is the section entitled "Student Administration." Included in this all-important section are all official bodies of the ASUO, with living-organization groups included.

The introduction presents the year in narrative form, beginning with the arrival of President O. Meredith Wilson and his family. Events, and not places, are emphasized here, the book's editor points out.

Graduates are pictured in alphabetical order, not categorized according to department of major. And each school, in the following section, features its two top scholars from the 1956 class.

Narrative Style

The book is organized in the "narrative yearbook style," Southwell explains. All events are merged, and are presented chronologically beginning with fall term and including each term's athletic events separately in this way.

Probably one of the most delightful and unique features is the emphasis on individuals, gained by using cut out figures . . . for example, each president, of each group, is cut out from the background and thus stands alone.
