

AFTER LONG ROMANCE

Eddie, Debbie Trade Vows

GROSSINGER, N. Y. (AP) — Singer Eddie Fisher and actress Debbie Reynolds, who kept the show business world agog for a year with their romance, were married Monday night in a three-minute ceremony.

Eddie kissed his bride with gusto and she sighed with delight.

Sullivan County Judge Lawrence Cooke performed the simple ceremony in a cottage at the Hotel Grossinger, a Catskill Mountain resort 100 miles from New York. Eddie got his start there six years ago.

Ceremony Held in Cottage

The young couple repeated their marital vows in clear voices, but Eddie's "I do" was barely audible in the living room of the cottage, crowded with relatives and friends.

Six candles burned in a candelabra. The room was banked with white flowers. In another room, a six-tiered five-foot wedding cake was the centerpiece for the wedding reception.

After the ceremony, Judge Cooke told the bride and groom:

"I know this ceremony was planned for yesterday. I admire you, Mr. Fisher, for keeping the precepts of your religion, and you, Mrs. Fisher, for respecting your husband's beliefs."

He referred to Yom Kippur, the Jewish day of atonement which began Sunday night and ended at sundown Monday night. Eddie is Jewish and spent the day at a quiet religious service and in meditation.

Wedding Delayed

The wedding was delayed for an hour because the bride's mother, Mrs. Maxine Reynolds of Burbank, Calif., arrived late. Heavy traffic held her up and she needed time to dress for the nuptials.

Judge Cooke, a burly, bespectacled man, said of the newlyweds:

"The almighty God has blessed them both with great talent, but the richest gift will come from the joys and happiness that will flow from this marriage."

Groom's Mother Comments

The mother of the groom, Mrs. Kate Stupp of Philadelphia, had this to say about the long-expected but much-delayed marriage: "If you just leave the children alone, they will always manage all right."

Following the reception at the Hotel Grossinger, the couple left for a one-day honeymoon "somewhere nearby" in the Catskills. Eddie is due in Washington at 6 p.m. Tuesday for a singing engagement.

The newlyweds said they expected to be in New York City for the opening game of the World Series Wednesday.

OSC Enrollment Reaches 5,711

CORVALLIS (AP) — Preliminary fall term enrollment at Oregon State College reached 5,711 students Monday, an increase of 17 per cent over the corresponding day a year ago, Registrar D. T. Ordeman said.

Classes started Monday but registration will continue for two weeks. Ordeman said the final enrollment last fall was 5,241 compared to 4,862 on the first day of classes. That indicates a final enrollment this fall of nearly 6,000, he said.

The number of new students is up 24 per cent from last year. A total of 2,337 new students have registered so far this year compared with 1,887 at this time last year.

A total of 479 men were pledged by the 30 OSC fraternities as the first rush period of the year ended.

Western Big Three Discuss Strategy

NEW YORK (AP)—Western Big Three foreign ministers begin Tuesday strategy talks to prepare for Big Four foreign ministers meeting in Geneva, Oct. 27.

Their tentative schedule calls for them to be joined by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov at dinners Tuesday night and Thursday.

Big Three sessions will be held Tuesday attended by Secretary of State Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Harold MacMillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay.

These talks will deal with West German Chancellor Adenauer's recent mission to Moscow, his talks on German reunification and the role Germany will play in the Atlantic alliance in the face of new disarmament demands by the Soviet Union.

Reports from there said the West had framed a program insisting on German unification as the major aim of Western strategy but not at the price of losing a unified Germany to NATO.

Molotov Presses Campaign For Disarmament Decision

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and his chief aides pressed a campaign Monday to get a positive decision on disarmament—Russian style—in the current session of the U.N. Assembly.

Following up his Friday speech, Molotov has been entertaining other delegates at a series of dinners and urging action on them in private talks.

Jacob A. Malik, Soviet ambassador to London and the Russian envoy to disarmament talks there earlier this year, has been riding the flank picking up delegates high and low for talks in and out of U.N. halls.

Monday he held a long talk with Anthony Nutting, British minister of state, on Soviet disarmament aims centered about nuclear weapons bans.

Delegates Concerned

The new Soviet campaign was launched as some U.N. delegates privately expressed concern for disarmament progress in view of President Eisenhower's illness. Paul Martin of Canada opened his policy speech Monday with an expression of hope for the President's speedy recovery.

Diplomatic informants who reported the overtures from the Soviet delegation said the President's plan for an exchange of aerial inspections between the United States and Russia was bold and far reaching, but they did not know how far it would get without his personal prodding.

Molotov and Secretary of State Dulles may discuss the disarmament situation Tuesday night when the Russian attends a dinner Dulles is giving for the foreign ministers of the Big Four powers.

Diplomats Argue

Molotov and Dulles got off to a bad start when Dulles accused Molotov of misquoting him on disarmament but Molotov tried to fix that with a quick talk last Friday.

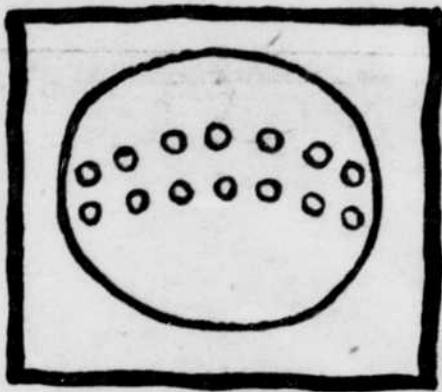

The United States is pressing for an Assembly endorsement of President Eisenhower's proposal.

Disarmament played a central role in discussions by a number of medium and small countries during the day's debate.

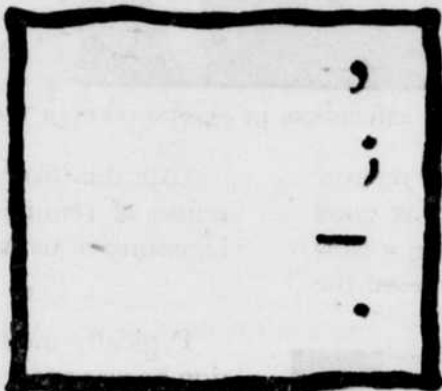

Martin noted there had been a relaxation of tension as a result of the Geneva meetings of the Big Four last July. He said there appeared to be some degree of general agreement in sight on proposals advanced in the U.N.
