Yanks Invade Flatbush Scenting Series Sweep

Ed. Note: This is the second in a series of commentaries on World Series by Emerald baseball expert Jim Larimore. Larimore was on the public relations staff of the Kansas City Athletics this summer and has observed all the Major League teams in action.

On Friday, Sept. 23, the New York Yankees clinched the American League pennant by winning the second game of a double header from the Boston Red Sox at Fenway park. During the tumultuous dressing room celebration afterward, a reporter asked manager Casey Stengel his opinion of the impending World Series with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Ol' Case' made what now appears to be a most significant statement. He simply said "the Yankees will take care of the Series." That is just what New York has done in the first two contests at spacious Yankee stadium, rising to the occasion in true Yankee fashion.

In the first game, before 63,689 cheering onlookers, the Dodgers turned in the "big" plays, headed by Jackie Robinson's theft of home plate in the eighth; but first baseman Joe Collins, ill most of the regular season and displaying a puny .234 batting average, came through in the clutch to blast two home runs and be responsible for four Yankee runs. Collins thereby reversed his "flop" in the 1952 series and the Bronx Bombers held on to win a thriller, 6-5.

Byrne First to Last Route

Manager Stengel's two top pitchers in 1955 have been Whitey Ford and Tommy Byrne, both southpaws. The experts saw this as a Dodger advantage, as a left-hander had not gone the winning route against the awesome right hand slugging of Brooklyn since Joe Nuxhall of the Cincinnati Redlegs turned the trick in September, 1954.

It remained for the graying Byrne to shatter this record after Ford gained credit for the first game victory. Byrne (16-5) turned in a neat five-hit 4-2 victory with a great clutch strikeout of Duke Snider in the eighth in a two-on, two-out situation. This alone would be enough accomplishments in one day for most pitchers but Tommy also singled

Bauer May Be Out Too, As Yank Outfielder Ails

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees move into Ebbets field Friday faced with the possibility of finishing the World Series without the services of Hank Bauer in addition to Mickel Mantle.

Bauer pulled a right leg muscle in the first inning Thursday as the Yankees made it two straight over the Brooklyn Dodgers with a 4-2 victory behind Tommy Byrne.

Injured in Steal

The slugging rightfielder injured the leg when he was doubled up trying to steal second on a third strike thrown to Gil McDougald. He had to retire from the game two innings later.

Mantle, of course, is still plagued by a torn muscle in the right thigh which kept him out in the winning runs during the fourth inning New York uprising. If this likable native of Wake Forest, N. C., fails to receive "Comeback of the Year" honors this reporter will down a helping of homburg hamburger with crow relish.

Series Moves to Brooklyn

Thus, New York moves in to the cramped quarters of Ebbets field with a two game bulge and their three best right handers ready to fire.

Today, it will be fast balling Bob Turley (17-13) versus youthful Johnny Podres (10-10) and the first southpaw to start against the Yanks. It will probably be Bob Grim (7-5) or Don Larsen (9-3) against Carl Erskine (11-8) Saturday.

Brooklyn, in a last ditch stand, would have to set a major league record to triumph since no team in baseball history has come back to take the seven game series after dropping the first two games.

The convenient left field stands in Flatbush may lead to still more fireworks as both clubs display vaunted right hand hitting power.

Fans are getting a real treat watching the defensive play of these two fine, well rounded teams. Especially brilliant is the execution of the difficult first to short to first variations of the double play by Brooklyn's Gil Hodges.

Twin Kill Mark Set

The New York infield of Gil McDougald, 3b; Gerry Coleman, ss; Billy Martin, 2b; and Joe Collins, 1b; is wonderful to behold completing a lightning double play. The Yankees and of the first two games at Yankee Stadium.

Another Yank outfielder, Irv Noren, has been a silent partner in the Injuries, Inc. Noren admitted he's been playing "about a month" with a bum knee, but added he's going to play out the series.

The Dodgers were quoted the 11-10 favorites to win the third game of the Series Friday as the competition switched to their home diamond.

But the New York Yankees, leading 2-0 in games, remained the choice to win the series at 5-2.

Rain ending early in the afternoon was the weather forecast Thursday night for the third game of the Series Friday.

The weatherman said Friday would be cloudy. Fair and cooler was forecast for Saturday.

Dodgers set a new World Series record Thursday as a total of six were racked up by both teams.

If it goes to the fifth game, Manager Walt Alston of the Bums will have to counter with Don Newcombe, who lost the opening game and is suffering from an acute attack of gopherballitis.

New York rooters beware; that worn-out cliché still goes "in baseball, anything can happen." Not a single Brooklynite has hollered, "the Dodgers is dead," and till the Dodgers have lost four games they'll still be in there fighting.

However this reporter is sticking to his pre-Series prognostication of the Yanks in six.

No Sale Sign Up In Giant Office

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Giant officials Thursday announced the club was not for sale.

Bill Terry, former Giant manager, had said Wednesday he was interested in buying the club if it was for sale. This drew the following statement from Horace Stoneham, Giants' president.

"The New York Giants are not for sale."

"If ever they are for sale the negotiating will be done with one of several New York City individuals or groups who, from time to time, have expressed an interest in the New York Giants."

Deer Hunters Migrate For Saturday Opening

PORTLAND (AP)—The annual migration of Oregon hunters is under way in preparation for of the general buck deer season Saturday.

The State Game commission estimates that some 200,000 nimrods will be in the wood, seeking deer which have been noted in record numbers in most parts of the state.

Weather Key Factor

Whether the hunters have record success will depend in part on the weather. In some parts of Oregon, notably the drought-stricken central area, rains have been helpful. But in others, if the rains continue, there likely will be dense fog and poor visibility for the opening day.

In general, though, the Game commission says prospects are good for hunter success exceeding last year's record 112,000-animal bag.

Two Week Season Set

The general season will run 14 days for buck deer only with antlers of two or more points. Then it will continue on that same basis through Oct. 21 in Jackson, Josephine, Douglas, Coos and Curry counties and the part of Klamath that is south of Highway 230 and west of Highway 97.

Most parts of Oregon, though, son, Oct. 15-21. This will be limited in Deschutes National forest to Oct. 16-21. Only Sherman of the Eastern Oregon counties will not have the either-sex season.

Caution was urged. Weyerhaeuser Timber company, taking note of the annual lost-hunter

Sooners, Maryland Picked as Winners

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK (AP)—The pungent odor of liniment and mad din of the Yankees' dressing room are disconcerting factors for our weekly seance with the spirits of the football world.

But with 36 winners in 47 games last week, including Maryland over UCLA, and a season's mark of 58-119 for .753, we have a little room for error.

Maryland over Baylor: Good chance for the day's major upset but we feel Maryland can still suffer a letdown and plough through. It's an "old pro" club with the best line in the nation.

Oklahoma over Pittsburgh: The Sooners' Bud Wilkinson must win two big outside games, this one and Texas next week. He's pointing.

Wisconsin over Iowa: A fine Big Ten battle. Our vote on the Badgers because they're at home and have a lad named Charley Thomas.

Arkansas over Texas Christian: This is TCU's best team in a decade. But the Razorbacks are cantankerous in Fayetteville.

Army over Penn State: Don Hollender is let loose at quarterback and leads the Cadets to a two-touchdown victory.

Southern California over Texas Friday night: The Trojans are reported to have the best collection of material in years.

Michigan over Michigan State: Ron Kramer heads an experienced cast which marks the Wolverines as perhaps the Big Ten's most potent.

Georgia Tech over SMU: Team speed and alertness win again for the Engineers.

Notre Dame over Indiana: The Irish have solved their quarterback problem with Paul Hornung. Should win by two TD's. UCLA over Washington State: The Uclans are lucky to have a breather.

Ohio State over Stanford: The Rose Bowl champs romp again. Stanford suffering.

The others:
Friday night:
Miami, Fla., over Florida State, Wichita over Detroit, Mississippi Southern over Chattanooga.

Saturday:
East — Colgate over Cornell, Princeton over Columbia, Navy over South Carolina, Yale over Brown, Boston U. over Connecticut, Dartmouth over Holy Cross, Harvard over Massachusetts.

Midwest—Purdue over Minnesota, Missouri over Utah, Marquette over Tulsa, Kansas State over Nebraska, Illinois over Iowa State, Colorado over Kansas, Miami (Ohio) over Xavier (Ohio).

South—Duke over Tennessee, Kentucky over Villanova, West Virginia over Wake Forest, Auburn over Florida, Georgia over Clemson, North Carolina over North Carolina State, Tulane over Northwestern, Alabama over Vanderbilt, Richmond over VMI, Virginia over George Washington, Virginia Tech over William & Mary, Mississippi over North Texas State, Mississippi State over Memphis State.

Southwest—Texas Tech over Oklahoma A&M, Rice over LSU, Texas A&M over Houston, Hardin-Simmons over N. Mexico A&M.

Far West—Washington over Oregon, California over Pennsylvania, Wyoming over Utah State, College of the Pacific over Cincinnati, Montana over Brigham Young, Denver over Colorado A&M, Arizona over Idaho.

problem on its tree farms, has prepared a booklet on how not to get lost. It will issue them at several of the entry points to company land.

Commission Gives Preview

The weekly hunting report as released by the Oregon State Game commission Thursday:

NORTHWEST—Excellent hunting may be expected throughout the Tillamook Burn providing the weather clears. Prospects are excellent at lower elevations with best chances near fringe agricultural areas where green feed is available. Hunters are cautioned to obtain permission before entering private land. Deer hunting in the southern Willamette area, is expected to be good opening week and if weather clears. Archers will not be required to check in at the McDonald forestry archery area but must check out any deer killed.

SOUTHWEST—Josephine county high altitude deer country will be unproductive in most areas. Best success will be had in the low hills adjacent to the valley. In Jackson county Cascade country hunting conditions are good. Hunting prospects in Coos and Curry counties are fair for the opening week end. Best places are in Old Burns, recent logging, and around foothill farm lands.

CENTRAL—Hunting is expected to be fairly good in the Ochoco forest on opening week and especially on the east half of the forest and in the Lookout mountain protective association area.

A $1.00 permit is required in this area. Permits are available at Ernie's sport shop in Prineville. Hunting should also be fairly good on the north slopes of Maury mountain. Hunting in the Deschutes forest should be best in the Lapine, China Hat, Spring Butte, and Metolius area.

Bowling Leagues Open Next Week

Three separate bowling tournaments will get under way during October, with the faculty league beginning 28 weeks of competition at 7 p.m. Monday.

The fraternity league will start competition at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, October 1. The dormitory league will begin seven weeks of bowling on the following evening, Oct. 12, at 6:30.

An All-Campus Mixed Doubles tournament, open to all faculty, employees and students of the University, is slated to begin at 7:00 p. m., October 13. Student Union Recreation Director Louie Bellissimo states all those interested in entering teams, are directed to sign up at the recreation desk. The number of entrants in the league will be governed on a first come, first served basis.
