Close Vote, 18-15 Ends Hour Debate

VOL. LVII UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1956 NO. 109

Ramsey, Raoul-Duval Selected for Senate

Jerry Ramsey was elected freshman class representative, and Diane Raoul-Duval, senator-at-large, at the ASUO senate meeting Thursday night.

Ramsey, a liberal arts major, is president of Hunter hall and works on the Emerald sports desk. He was Madras Union high school student body president and editor of his high school paper. Miss Raoul-Duval is a sectional editor for the Oregonian and a member of the traffic court.

Total 20 Petitions

The fourteen other petitioners for freshman representative were Joe Carson, Rick Cleveland, Phil Hager, Darrel Hansen, Mike DeVore, Walter Schreck, Richard Shaw, Tom Harding, Tom Henderson, Milford Cundiff, Charmion Ford, Ron Rohner, Ida Pletchny, and Bill Seal.

Others seeking the senate-at-large post were Dick Allen, Birger Brandt, Chuck Cowen and Quincy Powers.

Bud Hinkson, ASUO president, reported on the faculty rating system and parking committee proposals discussed at the cabinet meeting.

Rating Proposed

Under the rating system, forms would be distributed, by which students could evaluate their teachers. It would give the instructors an opportunity to improve their classes and let the administration know the capabilities of the faculty members. Hinkson will appoint senate representatives to present the plan to the faculty senate.

The cabinet also advised abandoning the plans for building a multi-floor parking lot. President O. Meredith Wilson who appeared before the cabinet, did not favor leasing the property, and he felt the University would be unable to undertake the project itself. However, a plan to assure a parking place for people who have to drive their cars to the campus will be considered.

Committee Approved

The senate also approved the plan to set up the Athletic Director's Advisory committee, as it was submitted by the ASUO Athletic Chairman Phil Lynch. Under this plan, prospective athletes will be encouraged to come to the University by students enrolled here now.

The committee also will serve as a clearing house between the students and the athletic department when difficulties arise.

The amendments to the constitutional by-laws, clarifying the senate's position in making athletic awards, were passed by the required two-thirds majority.

In the future the senate will vote on awards prior to presentation, and the awarding will be the responsibility of the ASUO athletic chairman.

Dick Blue reported that 800 high school students had registered for Duck Preview weekend as of Monday. He proposed having millrace events for the prospective students during future Preview weekends.

Seligman to Advise

L. G. Seligman, assistant professor of political science will be the advisor for the Mock Political convention, according to Rob Roy and Patty Fagan, chairmen. They are appointing delegates from each house to the convention planning committee. Off-campus students also will be represented.

Nan Hagedorn summarized the activities sponsored by the Crusade for Freedom during the past week.

A discussion of campus politics comprised the rest of the meeting.

Senate Passes Amendment To Constitution

An amendment to the ASUO constitution which would do away with the all-campus primary and would provide for an ASUO ballot divided as to ASUO presidential and senator-at-large candidates was passed Thursday night by the senate.

The amendment, proposed by graduate representative John Whitty, will be voted upon by the student body at a special election tentatively set for April 25. One-third of the student body would have to vote in this election for it to be valid, and of this number two-thirds would have to vote affirmatively in order for the amendment to pass.

The proposal allows for a ballot in which ASUO presidential candidates would be voted upon among themselves, and in which losing candidates would automatically be considered for senator-at-large. In the class elections, it works in the opposite — that is, candidates for class president would not be considered for class representative.

Delegates Sent To YMCA Meet

The campus YMCA will send a delegation to the Westwinds Conference, the district YMCA outing, this week-end at Westwinds Camp, according to Dick Shaw, publicity chairman.

Theme of the conference is "Touchstones of Truth." Purpose of the conference is to seek to find the relationship of religion to jazz and art and other contemporary cultural media such as drama, dance and literature.

Special speaker for the event will be Paul Keyser, regional YM executive.

Besides the religious knowledge gained from the conference, there will be entertainment and recreational activities.

The conference is open to all YM members, Shaw said.

A graduate of Oregon State, she has been teaching at the University since 1932. Previously she spent some time in China and Scandinavia.

YR's Defer Vote On Endorsement

The Young Republicans Thursday night decided to take no action on the College League board's recommendation to endorse Philip Hitchcock on the GOP primary, since a quorum was lacking at their meeting.

Jim McKenney, president, relinquished the chair to express his views. He said "It is not the function of the Young Republicans to endorse any candidate..." He said although the constitution allowed College League clubs to endorse candidates, he believed "It would dictate the views of certain members" and that "it might lead to factions."

Gerald Jones, president of the Western Federation of Young Republicans and co-chairman of the coming pre-primary convention in Eugene this weekend said "I don't think there would be any split. Regardless of whom you endorse, it's to work for good candidates." The group decided to approach all members of the club before making a decision.

Dissent Expected

Meanwhile, Associated Press reports Thursday quoted Young Republican leaders throughout the state as saying they expected a floor fight at the convention, on whether the group should endorse Douglas McKay or Hitchcock for the GOP nomination for the senate spot.

The AP quoted Jim Hatfield, state chairman of the group in Salem, as saying he and other leaders were agreed the organization as a whole should not choose sides but that there will undoubtedly be those who don't agree with this.

Associated Greek Students, by a vote of 18-15, voted to abolish itself Thursday afternoon.

Following more than an hour of debate, including the proposal of a resolution by which AGS would abandon all "political activity," the house representatives made their decision.

ASUO President Bud Hinkson's proposed resolution came as a surprise to most delegates. It was tabled until after consideration of the proposed abolition, the matter upon which most houses instructed their delegates. If the vote for disbanding had failed to pass, presumably the group would have reconsidered the plan.

Senior Class President Martin Bonifels spoke up first, after Darrel Brittsan opened the floor for discussion.

He attacked the argument that disbanding the party would destroy Greek unity.

Citing house competition in rushing, campus honors and activities, and intramural athletics, he said Greeks now fight Greeks in the AGS primary.

He compared AGS to a "grape hanging on the limb of the Greek system," and said the party was the result, not the cause, of Greek unity.

Hinkson then explained the multi-party system, which he proposed as a substitute for the two-party system.

Jerry Farrow, one of those fighting abolition, said "we all agree a change is needed." He proposed defeating the motion to abolish the party and then reaching some compromise before the spring elections.

Don Bonime, former AGS president, advised that AGS had put up good men for office in the past and especially praised Hinkson for the way he had conducted his office. He said there was no reason to change a system that had worked so well.

"A step forward," was the way Hinkson described the action of AGS. He was one of the first to suggest the multi-party system, along with Brandenfels, Brittsan, ASUO vice-president Sam Vahey, Junior Class President Doug Basham, and Graduate Representative John Whitty, who took an

Student Health Service Sets Up New Program

A new sanitation program has been set up by the student health service as the result of findings of the public health survey taken winter term.

The program will cost a total of nearly $20,000. Of this, $17,000 will go for a new x-ray unit which will allow the health service to give more repeat chest examinations, and the remainder will go for an additional nurse.

Under the existing program, students are x-rayed only when they enroll for the first time. The new unit would allow additional x-rays to be made of returning students each year. Ideally a person should be x-rayed once each year for tuberculosis.

Additional Nurse

The nurse will be available half-time to work with living organizations. Specially trained, she will be concerned particularly with campus kitchens, which were the center of the problems found in the health survey.

Victor C. Morgan, senior sanitarian of the Lane county health department, made the survey at the request of Dr. Fred N. Miller, director of the student health service. During winter term 16 living organizations picked at random were inspected without warning by a team of two men.

Guides from the committee on hygiene of housing of the American Public Health association and from the U. S. Public Health service code regulating eating establishments, formed the basis for inspections.

Worst Problems

Worst problems found in the survey were a lack of bactericidal treatment of dishes, plumbing defects, inadequate milk cans, defective garbage cans and
