UO Medical School Grad on TV Show

A 1947 graduate of the University of Oregon successfully outwitted the panel of experts on CBS television show "What's My Line?" Sunday night.

Miss Carolyn Taylor, of Portland, won $50 and an expense paid trip from Ft. Knox, Kentucky, to New York City, when the panel failed to discover that she is a U.S. Army doctor.

Miss Taylor, a 1950 graduate of the University of Oregon medical school, joined the army last winter with a rank of captain, and took her regular basic training with 450 men at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

She is presently stationed at Ft. Knox, Kentucky, awaiting overseas assignment. She hopes to be sent to Germany in June.

John Daly was master of ceremonies of the show. Included on the panel which interviewed Miss Taylor were Robert Q. Lewis, Hedda Hopper and Dorothy Kilgallen.
