Veep Nixon's Arrival Sees Busy Reception

By BILL COOK
Emerald Staff Writer

From the moment the flagship "Little Rock" touched its wheels at Eugene airport Wednesday afternoon bearing Richard M. Nixon, a whirl of well organized activity surrounded the vice-president.

State and local Republican leaders headed by Douglas McKay were lined up expectantly to meet the smiling Nixon as he deplaned with his wife, Pat. With him were newsmen and photographers who quickly shot the necessary pictures of Nixon and McKay shaking hands on the airport ramp.

The crowd was small and varied, ranging from small children waving banners to party workers to everyday folk excited by the glamorous of seeing an important leader so close at hand. Outstanding among the last was an older lady who clutched a letter from Nixon and said as he shook her hand, "I received your letter. Thank you so much. Good luck and God bless you." In the background were the ever-present Secret Service men trying so hard to be inconspicuous that they were obvious.

Holds Press Conference

When the hand-shaking was over, the vice-president was ushered into a press conference with the Secret Service clearing the way. This reporter discovered their efficiency when upon nearly colliding with Mrs. Nixon, he was snatched out of the way by a very husky agent.

Nixon left the short press conference soon after and was hustled into a motorcade which headed for the Eugene hotel. At the hotel Nixon "dropped in" on a precinct meeting in progress, then moved on to a veterans meeting and a reception. He then retired to his room to rest for his speech at McArthur court.

Hall Decorated

The basketball pavilion was transformed into a junior convention hall for the speech with posters, signs, elephant heads, and placards for the audience to wave. The halls and aisles were swarming with Eugene police, members of the Sheriff's posse—wearing their guns for the big event—and of course the Secret Service, still looking "inconspicuous." Two of them were sighted inspecting the area under the speakers platform.

The evening's excitement got underway with the entrance of a color guard marching to music reminiscent of the late lamented three ring circus. The ceremony became a complete fiasco when the Oregon flag refused to stand. And of course Dandy, the ATO mascot, was there.

Platform activities began with the introduction of state and local candidates from coroner to U.S. Senator—the candidate for secretary of state was conspicuously absent — and short speeches.

Nixon Enters

At last it was time for Nixon to arrive. Right on schedule, at 7:55, he entered the packed auditorium. He was introduced by Harris Ellsworth and promptly at 8 p.m. Nixon began to speak.

He spoke in a vigorous style somewhat like a first affirmative speaker in a debate, due perhaps to his debating experience and the fact that he was supporting the party in power.

A note of campus interest was supplied when Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's honorary, tapped Nixon as he left the auditorium. Nixon thanked Wait Schreck, president, for the insignia of the honorary and said he would "wear it at my next speech, but not at Oregon State."
