

Montovani Here Thursday Night

Mantovani and his 45-piece "singing strings" orchestra appear in McArthur Court Thursday evening, at 8, with admission being by CMA membership and student body cards only.

Noted as the "king of British recording artists," Mantovani has gained an immense American following in recent years through his distinctive violin style in the "new music" trend used in both popular and semi-classical selections.

Born in Venice, the son of a famous violinist, he moved to England at an early age. He is not only a violinist himself, but also a composer, conductor and arranger.

In the late twenties Mantovani presented his first orchestra to the public, from that time he has advanced to world renown. However, it was not until 1950 that a series of his records were released in America and brought about his great success. "Mara Mia," his own composition, along with his lush musical arrangements of such favorites as "Charmaine" and "Moulin Rouge" have been among his greatest sellers.

Phone Calls Hoax Cleveland Claims

All themes for organization entered in the Homecoming float contest have been turned in to the float chairman despite telephone calls to the contrary. Rick Cleveland, Homecoming float chairman reported.

Another hoaxster called organizations entered in the contest Monday telling them that they couldn't enter because their themes weren't in, which is completely false, Cleveland said.

Sweeping melody, combined with orchestral ingenuity, have been described as the key to the unprecedented popularity of Mantovani and his "new music." His own styling of a melody, through the distinctive use of strings, is as individual to his orchestra as was the "Glenn Miller sound" to that popular American orchestra.

Mantovani is in his forties, lives in London with his wife and two children. Most of his time at home is spent orchestrating for his recording dates and worldwide appearances.

Morse to Discuss Issues at Assembly

Oregon's senior U.S. Senator, Democrat Wayne Morse, will be featured in a question and answer discussion today at a 1 p.m. assembly in the Student Union ballroom. He will answer questions which have been submitted to W. A. Dahlberg, associate professor of speech.

Morse is now campaigning for a third term in the Senate, and is opposed by Douglas McKay, former Governor of Oregon and former Secretary of the Interior. Morse was first elected in 1944, while dean of the University of Oregon law school.

Senator Morse did undergraduate work at the University of Wisconsin. After graduation he taught argumentation there for a year before studying law at the University of Minnesota and Columbia university.

In 1929 Morse joined the University of Oregon faculty. Two years later, at the age of 30, he became dean of the law school, which made him the youngest law dean in the nation.

President Roosevelt appointed Morse chairman of the National Railroad Emergency board in 1941 a few years after he headed a nationwide study of parole, probation and release procedures. Later the President named him to the National War Labor board. He resigned from this position in 1944 to run for the Senate.

Morse has said that he is the Eisenhower administration's number one senatorial target in this election.

Morse was one of the first nationally prominent men to urge the Republican nomination of Eisenhower in 1952. After Eisenhower's nomination and the election Morse decided to endorse Stevenson. He then left the Republican party to become an Independent. In 1955 Morse changed his registration to the Democratic party.

Senator Morse has shown a special interest in education, and is now supporting a bill which would provide federal aid to states for educational purposes. In 1945 he introduced a bill to survey school building needs. In 1947 he was a member of the Senate Education and Labor committee and in 1949 by co-sponsoring another school aid bill with the late Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio.

He has also favored lowering retirement age for women, research funds for heart disease, the Salk vaccine and cancer program, broadened social security coverage, housing assistance and civil defense measures.

He has supported the Marshall plan, NATO, and the United Nations.

Morse and most Oregon and national political analysts have predicted his re-election on Nov. 6.

NATO Country Journalists Visit

Eighteen NATO country journalists will be guests at a coffee hour forum from 2 to 3 p.m. today.

The forum will be held in the Allen Room of the journalism building. Interpreters will be present.

Following the coffee hour, the journalists and Sen. Wayne Morse will attend a coffee hour at the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Morse is a member of the fraternity.

The journalists came to this country for the purpose of studying political party machinery, campaign issues and methods. They represent West Germany, France, Holland, Norway, Italy, Greece, Denmark, and Holland.

During their week stay in Oregon, the foreign journalists will study various political campaign issues and tactics. They will pay particular attention to the race for U.S. Senator between Douglas McKay and Morse. They plan to attend Morse's speech at 1 p.m. today.

Oregon was chosen as one of the states for study by the group because so many of the nationwide issues are compressed in the various political campaigns here.

Frosh Choose Theme for Show

"See the USA—The Freshman Way" has been chosen as the theme of the freshman talent show to be presented Nov. 30 under the co-chairmanship of Janet Clark and Dave Fredrickson.

Special talent show petitions may be picked up later this week in the ASUO petition box on the third floor of the Student Union. Auditions will follow the petitioning.

Straw Ballot Votes Cast Today

Students and faculty of the University are voting today on candidates for President, Senator, Governor and Secretary of State in the Emerald Straw Vote.

Five thousand ballots have been printed for the mock election, which ends today at 5 p.m. Booths are open at the Student Union and the Co-op.

Members of all campus living organizations will be contacted during the noon hour by precinct committeemen, according to Bud Titus, general chairman.

Completed ballots should be returned to the Emerald as soon as possible, Titus said. He urged all living organizations to turn them in by 2 p.m., with 4 p.m. the final deadline.

Results of the voting will be announced in Wednesday's Emerald, with a table showing the voting results from each precinct.

More than 50 freshman women will count ballots today and tonight in the Emerald Straw Vote.

Any freshmen interested have been asked to contact Karen Mauney in Carson 4, Ginger Young in Hendricks, Carolyn Parson at Susan Campbell or Joanne Morrissey in Carson 5. They will be in charge of the project, according to Bud Titus, general chairman.

Those who can are asked to meet at 2 p.m. at the Emerald office, third floor of Allen Hall.

Each living organization comprises a separate precinct.

Results will also be carried by the Associated Press.

Each student in a living organization will be given a ballot, according to Titus. After it is marked it will be turned in to his precinct committeeman, who will put a mark on the back of his student body card.

District supervisors, appointed by Titus, are Ned Mackey, Rob Roy, Nan Hagedorn, Chuck Cowen, Jerry Ramsey, Gordon Summers, Larrilyn Carr and Sam Vahey.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND FACULTY will vote today in the Emerald Straw Vote. The election will determine political feelings of members of the University one week before the general election. Shown above are Martha Tubbs, left, Bud Titus, general chairman of the election, and Marcia Lindley.
