

Religious Speakers Lauded; RE Attendance Rated Poor

By CAROLE BEECH
Religious News Editor

Another annual Religious Evaluation Week came to a close Thursday night and all who attended regularly agreed that this year's panel of speakers, on the whole, was one of the best in years.

As usual, however, the only discouraging thing about the week was attendance. It is no merit to University students when only three per cent of them attend discussions desperately relevant to the meaning of life. Also, it is not a good reflection on campus fraternities and sororities when they hold compulsory rushing, pledging and initiating functions during hours of RE Week events. It seems these organizations should have been the very ones to encourage attendance, since they are so concerned with the ideals of "brotherhood under God."

ignorance" and that nowhere in that process do religious considerations enter.

In line with that question will be discussions on campus next week by Dr. Clarence P. Shedd, visiting professor of Pacific School of Religion at Berkeley. Dr. Shedd will stop in Eugene Tuesday and Wednesday on his way to Berkeley from Seattle where he has been one of the key speakers in the Northwest Conference of Religion in Higher Education held at the University of Washington.

Shedd Named Number One Man
Described by Time magazine as the "Number one man in religion and higher education," Dr. Shedd was director of Studies in Religion and Higher Education for 32 years at Yale University. At 10 a.m. Tuesday morning, he will meet with the Religious Director's Association at the First Baptist Church.

That evening at 7:30 he will speak to the faculty at Westminister House. Wednesday will be open for conferences, which can be made through Mrs. Dulcinea Elliott or the Rev. Ken Peterson. He will speak to the boards of directors of the local religious houses Wednesday evening.
