

METER MAIDS

'If You Can't Lick 'Em, Join Them,' Say Cops

BY BOB STOKES
Emerald Staff Writer

Girls, are you running out of beauty contests and sweetheart competitions to enter?

Well, here's a brand new title to add to your collection: Meter Maid. It not only offers a title, it offers a career.

The contest is being sponsored by the Civil Service Board of Portland to recruit a sturdy pioneer stock of women who will serve citations to parking violators. So if you're tired of being called one of those "blankety-blank women drivers," here is your chance for revenge.

One can see the craftiness of the PCSB in allowing only women with driver's licenses to apply. For every woman driver they hire to walk all day, Portland strikes another blow for traffic safety!

According to the PCSB announcement, only women between the ages of 23 and 35 inclusive may apply. This is undoubtedly part of the board's strict honesty test.

There will probably be a training course on how to write out a ticket in short-hand while the victim is racing you to his car; or how to decide which Volkswagen deserves a ticket when there are three crowded into one parking space.

For those interested, interviews will be held in Portland in November. Madame will be fingerprinted and her prison record will be checked. If she is a war veteran, she will be given veteran's preference. If she is a veteran wounded in action, the job is in the bag.

The Meter Maid must be physically able to pound the pavement 8 hours a day, 40 hours a week, in fair weather or foul. High heels are not recommended. If, at the age of 65, our heroine isn't pounding her beat up yonder, she will receive enough retirement benefits to keep her in Dr. Scholls for her twilight years.
