Editors Discuss . . .

that has come to America either.)

Henderson Oracle, Henderson State Teachers college, Arkadelphia, Ark., discussed the state-owned development of new industry for Arkansas and an improved educational system, then lamented the Little Rock story.

And . . . "completely discounting the damage to our relations with regard to the international scene, it has hurt our state for a long time to come.

"The mud that now oozes off the state capitol will present pestilence enough to keep any major industry from even facetiously considering bringing their employees to our 'Land of Opportunity'."

Editors of the Denison, Denison University, Granville, Ohio, noted another angle to the Little Rock story, an issue they call "the whole sphere of states' rights vs. federal rights."

They think, "It would seem perhaps this challenge to Washington, this affront, is, after all, a good thing. We citizens may be getting carried away on the gigantic pendulum of federal interference.

"Perhaps the Faubus incident is a chance at least for all of us to consider the 'proper' emphasis of the two spheres—and perhaps a reconsideration of the predominant role of all government activity in our daily lives."

Consul Oppel was born in 1904, in Stuttgart, Germany. After attending the University of Munich Law school, he was appointed public prosecutor at Nuremberg in 1930. In 1932 he was appointed judge of the District Court in Nuremberg, but lost the office under nazism in 1937. He then took a job at MAN, the Augsburg machine factory, where the Diesel engine was invented.

At the end of the war, Oppel resumed his legal career; he was appointed Vice-President of the Superior Court at Augsburg. In September, 1952, he joined the diplomatic service, and was assigned to re-establish the German Consulate in Seattle. He is now Dean of the Seattle Consular corps.

Oppel is married, and has one daughter, who obtained her masters degree in English Literature from the University of Washington last year.

Consul Oppel will also appear at a coffee hour today at 4:00 in the Student Union. At this time, he will discuss "Pre-War Germany."

If you answered "No" to all questions, you obviously smoke Camels—a real cigarette. Only 6 or 7 "No" answers mean you better get onto Camels fast. Fewer than 6 "No's" and it really doesn't matter what you smoke. Anything's good enough!

But if you want a real smoke, make it Camels. Only Camel's exclusive blend of costly tobaccos tastes so rich, smokes so good and mild. No wonder more people today smoke Camels than any other cigarette. How about you?

Have a real cigarette—have a Camel
