Student Tickets For Trotter Tilt On Sale Tonight

Special student tickets at 60 cents each will be on sale at McArthur Court ticket office for the Harlem Globetrotter's Exhibition game set for Mac Court tonight at 8:00. The box office opens at 5:00 p.m.

The Globetrotters are expected to attract the biggest basketball turnout of the season as they will meet the Washington Generals in an exhibition game. Vaudeville acts to be staged before the game and at halftime include two acrobatic acts, a unicycle act, a hoop magician and a juggler.

Coach Abe Saperstein's club is probably the winningest team in basketball history. In 30 seasons the Globetrotters have amassed over 5,000 victories while losing less than 400.

Last year a near capacity crowd at Mac Court laughed and cheered as they joked their way to an 86-79 victory over the Honolulu Surf Riders.

Spouse tickets for tonight's game are 60 cents. Adult general admission is $1.25 while reserved seats sell for $1.80.

Saperstein's Trotters have experienced some unique incidents in the 30-year history of the world-renowned aggregation.

Like the time in Wheatland, Ia., many years ago. The trotters were playing in a hayloft. One of the opponents crashed into a Trotter. A door at the end of the hayloft failed to stop Saperstein's boy and out he fell into the night, a distance of 25 feet.

Horrified, Abe rushed out to see what had happened to his fallen player. Everything was all right. The Trotter had landed on a huge pile of fertilizer, and when he returned to the game, he smelled "just luscious." For years he was known as "Luscious Lester."

Then there was the time, back in 1949, when Saperstein and Co. first invaded Alaska. Playing before an Eskimo audience, they were completely flabbergasted when their best efforts produced not a single hand clap or demonstration of approval.

It developed later that this was the Eskimo method of showing appreciation—the more deathly the silence, the higher the approval.

Baylor Gets 48 Points In 97-75 Seattle Win

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Elgin "Rabbit" Baylor scored a fabulous 48 points here Sunday afternoon to lead Seattle University to a 97-75 victory over Portland University.

The victory was Seattle's second in two days over the Pilots. Saturday night the Chiefs down Portland 77-47. Baylor scored 21 in that one.

At that it was not a record for Baylor. He scored 51 points against Portland last year, and 54 against the Buchan Bakers.

He shot 29 times for his 19 field goals, and converted 10 of 13 chances at the free throw line. In addition he pulled in 20 rebounds and was credited with assists on five other baskets.

Jim Altenhofen and Red Bloedel of Portland took turns at trying to halt Baylor, but never alone. The entire Portland team sagged on the bounding Seattle star, whose tricks with the basketball often demoralize opponents.
