

FEW KANSAS CITY citizens ventured into raging snowstorm and then only if absolutely necessary. But these passengers wanted to get to their destinations. They pushed their stalled trolley bus over the top of a hill so they could be on their way. The 15-inch snowfall—the worst in the area since 1912—almost brought traffic to a complete stop in some sections.

KURT DREWS, 4, and his drum, are at the head of the line with his drum major father in the parade of carnival drummers celebrating in Mainz, Germany.

ALEXANDER DE SEVER-SKY, aeronautical consultant and writer on air power, gestures as he testifies before the Senate Preparedness subcommittee. He said that Russia has operational missiles with which every base within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense "could be wiped out instantaneously." The witness described "militarily unsound" the theory that NATO acts as "a shield force for the free world."

SIR JOHN COCKCROFT, Nobel prize winning physicist who helped build the first atomic bomb, is top administrator of Britain's Harwell atomic establishment. Work at Harwell has been aimed at harnessing for peace the power of atomic fusion.
