Mademoiselle poses question: Could you use $500, girls?

MADEMOISELLE, "the quality magazine for smart young women," has again begun its annual search for representative college women to compose its 1959 College Board.

The search is aimed toward a multiple of talents shown by the magazine's list of contest instructions, asking "What do you have to say? ... to draw or say? ... to promote, to design?" The suggestions given in the "Here's How" sheet range from photography illustration of a short story to a promotion campaign for fall fashions.

A single assignment is the only requirement for the tryouts for the Board. From these tryouts MADEMOISELLE will choose the Board members.

In addition to the Board contest MADEMOISELLE is again sponsoring its annual fiction contest, with no limitations placed on the number of manuscripts submitted by individual contestants. Stories that have been printed in undergraduate publications will be accepted if they have not been published elsewhere.

Rewards for the outstanding assignments submitted during the year for the College Board contest will include cash prizes and the privilege of being one of twenty guest editors of MADEMOISELLE'S August 1959 college edition. Details of this editorship will include a trip to New York and a salaried month on the staff of MADEMOISELLE.

A prize of $500 will be paid to the two top winners of the fiction contest for serial rights to their stories and publication in MADEMOISELLE. The magazine reserves the right to buy the works of the two receiving honorable mention at its own regular rates.

Eligibility for entrance in these contests consists of being a woman undergraduate under twenty-six and currently enrolled in an accredited college or junior college. To be eligible for the Board contest one must in addition be able to work in New York during the month of June 1959.

Separate sheets of rules and additional details on both contests have been placed on the bulletin board in the Emerald office. The deadline for the first tryout in the Board contest is midnight November 30. All entries for the fiction contest must be postmarked by midnight March 1, 1959.
