

Art show exhibit held at museum

The Oregon Art Alliance is now sponsoring a 400 entry art show at the University of Oregon Art Museum.

This is the first show of its type held by the Art Alliance, a state-wide organization with 40 chapters. Its membership is made of serious artists, art instructors, and Sunday painters.

The works in the current show, which will be in the Museum until Jan. 11, were judged by the noted music and art critic of the San Francisco Chronicle, Alfred Frankenstein.

On the basis of their work in this show, Frankenstein chose several Oregon artists to hold one man shows at the Museum this spring and next fall.

The winners of the one-man show spots were, Jack McLarty, acting dean of Portland Art Museum School of Art, in miscellaneous painting; Robert Cole, Portland State, in gouache; Ron Neperud, The Dalles, in prints; George Nightingale, La Grande in prints; Mrs. Kenneth Richardson, Portland, in weaving; and Tom Hardy, Coos Bay, in sculpture. Eugene winners were Max Nixon, of the architecture and Allied Arts School, in metal work; Robert James, of Eugene, in ceramics; and Will Martin, graduate of the architecture and Allied Arts School, in ink and charcoal. Several University students also exhibited their work in the show.

The objects d'art, many of which, incidentally, are for sale, are the creations of many artists whose work has never been on exhibition before. Oils, watercolors, prints, weaving, sculpture, and metal work are on display with about a third of it being in oils.

W. S. Baldinger, professor of art and director of the University Art Museum, has been pleased with the show as apparently the public has. "The Art Alliance show is representative of a cross section of the art of Oregon as it now exists.

The show is significant because the quality and diversity of work is especially high," Baldinger commented.

From each of the one-man shows a work will be selected for purchase directly from the artist and will be placed in the Oregon Art Collection which is to be inaugurated at the University.
