

Professor forecasts new British policies

By MARTIN WILLIAMS
Emerald Staff Writer

Future relations between the United States and Britain will be quite different, Brian S. Manning, visiting associate professor of history at the University from Kings College, London, told a Browsing Room audience Wednesday night.

Manning said that the British would show greater independence in policy which the U.S. will have to accept. But, the professor said, the British government will have to face the facts.

He cited a great feeling among the British public against U.S. foreign policy which will be increasingly hard to ignore in future official relations between the two countries.

"No revolution"

Speaking on the conditions in Britain since 1945, Manning said that the sweeping victory of the Labour Party in 1945 was not a revolution. Rather, he said, it was the result of changes that had already come about during the war.

Faced with losses in shipping and greatly in debt, Britain was forced to double pre-war trade to survive, Manning said. This was difficult to accomplish since the United States had flooded the economy with loans, he said.

Comments on nationalization

"The social services, the national health and insurance policies, are not a political system," Manning said. They were agreed upon during the war and could not be abandoned afterwards, he said.

High taxes to finance the war and these social services virtually exterminated the very rich, and brought a great improvement to the working class people and has led to increasing uniform-

Commenting on social class distinction, he told of the "BBC accent" used by the upper class.

"This is an important cultural cleavage and very much a problem," he pointed out. The lack of accent in American films and TV programs helps make them popular in Britain, the historian said.

The problems in industry were given careful attention by Manning. He discussed the "failure of private enterprise" as a failing of the middle class.

The government was forced to take over the industry for efficiency, not as a matter of socialism, he said. Dealing with the problems as they come up and effective human relations are the solution for the increased productivity Britain must have to survive economically in the future, Manning said.

"Scandinavian night" theme of program

Friday night will be "Scandinavian Night" for the Cosmopolitan Club with a program of folk songs, dances and movies, presented by Scandinavian students at the University.

Initiation held for AFROTC

Fifteen cadets in the Air Force ROTC detachment were initiated last week as new members in the Gen. Don Zimmerman squadron of Arnold Air Society.

The society is a national honorary for AFROTC units.

It is named after the late Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Force during World War II.

This year, the society squadron on the Oregon campus merged with the Sabre Air Command, which had been the freshman and sophomore AFROTC honorary.

Cadets initiated included seniors Keith E. Blue, Robert W. Dickson, Floyd E. Hargrove, Gerald E. Hill, Robert E. Schoen, and Clarke LeRoy Todd.

Juniors initiated were Michael D. Barnhart Jr., Edwin R. Capen, David O. Diercoff, Gerald A. Gustafson, Darryl E. Klein, William R. Muhr, and James A. Ross Jr.

The initiation ceremonies were held in the Eugene Veterans' Club.

Local commander of the squadron is Cadet Col. Donald C. Metz.

Steel merger banned

NEW YORK (AP) — Proposed merger of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. was banned Thursday by U.S. Dist. Judge Edward Weinfeld.

The proposed merger would have been the biggest in business history.

In an 88-page opinion, Judge Weinfeld concluded "there is reasonable probability that the merger of Bethlehem and Youngstown would be in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, substantially lessen competition, and tend to create a monopoly in the iron and steel industry."
