

Letters to the Editor

 a law student is totally detached from the fairer half of the race and were it not for such aids, chances are that we would completely forget just how pleasant a sweet young lady could be. Normally this problem can be alleviated by our parade-watching sessions on the steps, said solution being quite satisfactory.

However, this activity is sharply curtailed during winter quarter due to the poor weather and the long, thick, and I might add, deceptive, coats. And that is the reason you now find our walls decorated by young lovelies from sunnier climes.

And in case you are still not fully convinced of the nobility of our aims, then be you now informed as to the attitude of the law in such matters. Justice Good of the Supreme Court of Nebraska, a state well-noted for its delightful wenches, gave us the Fenton Motto in Bishop v. Liston, 112 Neb. 559, 199 N.W. 825 (1924), to wit: The Law "says to the libertine, who would rob a virtuous maiden... of the priceless and crowning jewel of maidenhood, that he does so at his peril." We, as a body, will have no truck with such activity and indignantly reject your snide innuendo!

Graduate school receives grants

The University graduate school has received four National Defense Education Fellowships in Romance languages, according to information received here.

Only 160 of the fellowships were awarded colleges and universities throughout the nation, according to Harry Alpert, dean of the university graduate school.

The fellowships which are given by the Office of Education under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, are for the purpose of helping graduate students prepare for college teaching.

Each grant is for a three-year fellowship student working toward his doctor of philosophy degree. Under terms of the awards he will receive $2000 for his first year, $2200 for his second year, and $2400 for his third year, plus $400 for each dependent per year. A contribution up to $2500 per fellow per year will be given the graduate school, Alpert said.

ODE TO A MAN

She ran her fingers through his hair
 He tried to make her stop;
 In her persistence she didn't care
 If she crushed his "curl on top."
