

PCC golfers tee off Friday

The Eugene Country Club is the site for the 1959 Pacific Coast Conference team and individual Golf Championships, with nine six-man squads competing for berths in the NCAA Golf Championships at Houston.

Squads started checking in Wednesday for the two day affair which begins Friday at 7:30 a.m. Arriving today are UCLA and the powerful defending PCC champs, USC, along with the rest of the field.

This year's match shapes up as one of the most interesting of the recent PCC Championships.

Much of the interest stems from the fact that Stanford's surprising Indian golfers pulled a major college golf upset last weekend in Palo Alto, defeating a strong USC golf team, that had not lost a dual match in the last 55 outings prior to Saturday on the farm.

Stanford, along with the Bruins from UCLA and Oregon, round out the field of four major contenders in this year's conference match.

The Indians, last year's runner up to the powerful Trojan squad, took a respectable seventh in last year's NCAA matches won by the University of Houston.

Off their strong performance on the farm last weekend, they should definitely be considered the strongest threat to USC's Coast golf supremacy.

Not out of the picture by any means are Sid Milligan's Ducks.

The Webfoots will be placing one of the youngest squads in the conference on the green this weekend. With the natural home links advantage, and the squads' rapid progress this season, the Ducks have to be considered close to the Indians as a challenger to the veteran Trojan squad.

Last year's third place finisher, UCLA is expected to show well in the final results by experience and a good season slate in their favor.

Other entrants in the 1959 tournament are Oregon State, Washington, Washington State, Idaho and California.

Practice rounds get underway Thursday morning with all nine squads expected to get in eighteen holes before the official competition starts Friday morning.

Friday the 72 whole team and individual play gets underway with all teams shooting 18 holes in the morning and duplicating the circuit in the afternoon.

Saturday the same order is on tap with final results to be posted late Saturday afternoon.

Oregon coach Sid Milligan has selected three veterans, Gary Hval, juniors Chuck Sivers and Captain Keith Gubrud and sophomores Tom Shaw, Tom Jackson and Chuck Hunter to the tournament team.

Swim meet slated in new Men's Pool

The first big activity in the new Men's Pool will take place Saturday when the University varsity, freshman and women's swimming teams will perform in a mock swimming meet for the purpose of training officials.

The event, slated to begin at 7 p.m., will be headed by swimming coach Don Van Rossen.

Van Rossen will also speak at the Central YMCA Friday night, beginning at 8 o'clock. His topic will be "Competitive Swimming Theory." The program slated for both evenings are related to the Northwest Area YMCA Aquatic Institute which will take place in Eugene this weekend.

The Saturday night program will be a good chance for University students to become better acquainted with the rules of the water sport; there will be no admission charge for the Saturday night program.
