

Inactivities . . .

 get to the stage of substituting contempt for football for the love of knowledge, send me a live hand-grenade. Sure you can have too much emphasis on football, or on fudge sundaes for that matter. The president of one of the mid-west dinosaur-stage schools is said to have remarked that he'd have a winning team if he had to hire a bunch of gorillas. I think he had lost right there; education had lost. If activities are only for winning a trophy or some symbol of "I'm it" then they are of doubtful value, possibly even harmful. Regretfully I have to admit that Oregon is on the edge of getting bigger and bigger. Maybe it will outgrow some activities; but I hope it doesn't get too big to do some of the small things that make it the pleasantest, friendly, companionable place it has been.
