Robert T. Oliver, head of the department of speech at Pennsylvania State University, will discuss United States entanglements in the Far East at the University assembly Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Oliver has worked with Far East relations in the past, acting as advisor to President Syngman Rhee of the Republic of Korea. He was also advisor to Korean delegation to the United Nations and to the Geneva Conference.

He wrote "Why War Came in Korea," and "Syngman Rhee: The Man Behind the Myth," both of which were selected by the New York Times as one of the fifty best non-fiction books of the year.

During World War II, Oliver was administrative assistant of the Victory Speakers Bureau and administrative head of the War Foods Administration.

He has held several positions in U.S. colleges and universities including the Dean of Clark Junior college in Vancouver, Wash., and head of the division of rhetoric and public address at Syracuse University.

Oliver was born in Sweet Home, Ore. He received his masters degree from the University of Oregon, and his doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Wisconsin.

No decision ready on UO president

The State Board of Higher Education will definitely not make a decision Tuesday concerning the new University president, according to Chancellor John Richards.

"The Board is considering three candidates, and one will be interviewed Tuesday," Richards said, "but there will be no decision by Tuesday. I don't know when the new president will be announced."

Concerning the story in Sunday's Register-Guard, Richards said, "I don't know where that came from. The reporter might have interviewed some members of the board."

USC places blame on UO for prank

"The Oregon State College Homecoming queen was kidnaped from the campus Friday afternoon but returned unharmed two hours later with a report—wholly expected—that University of Oregon students may have been responsible," states the "Oregon Journal."

Steve Schell, ASUO president, replied, "This kidnapping lacks finesse, the finesse, I am sure Oregon students possess." He proceeded to say that it was unfortunate this abduction had to happen and he felt someone was trying to get into the act and place the blame on the Oregon student body.

ARDIS HENRY of Seaside, queen of the Homecoming celebration which got under way Friday evening, said two young men lured her by force from her house then forced her into a car, blindfolded her, and held her in a motel at the edge of town. She was released unharmed.

She got the impression they were students from her rival institution at Eugene, but they did not identify themselves.

THREE YEARS ago the OSC queen and two members of her court were likewise abducted and taken to Salem before they were released.

Miss Henry said she was assured that she would be freed as soon as Richard Seidman, OSC student body president, got started on the way to Eugene. Shortly after the abduction, he got a note telling him to get on a motor scooter and ride to Eugene where the queen would be turned over to him, he told state police.

ABOUT 6 p.m. her captors called a taxi and sent Miss Henry to her house in time to join the evening's festivities.

Dist. Atty. John Fenner, OSC Alumni Association president, said "Civil authorities would take no note of the affair," thus writing it off as a prank.

Carlson will attend College Board meet

J. Spencer Carlson, representative of the University on the College Entrance Examination Board, will attend a meeting of the board's committee of research and development November 30 in New York City.

Senators date NSA action, establish screening group

The ASUO Senate might decide whether the University will join the United States National Student Association at its first meeting of winter term, according to Bud Snodgrass, chairman of the USNSA committee.

THUS FAR, the committee has divided itself into two groups; one to study what the University could gain through membership, the other to poll student body presidents throughout the country on their feeling toward the controversial group.

In other business at its meeting Thursday, the Senate

(1) VOTED unanimously to have the ASUO president approve athletic awards at its meeting Thursday.

(2) AUTHORIZED a standing committee on student government to act as its screening committee at Thursday's meeting. The motion provides that the committee shall interview all applicants for Senate appointments in executive (private) sessions. If there are more than five applicants, three shall be recommended to the Senate. The Senate will make ultimate approvals.

(3) REFERRED the inter-university cultural exchange program to the standing committee on academic and cultural activities for further study. The program, as outlined by Paul Ward, secretary-general of the Model United Nations, would provide for exchange of students, faculty, and administration between the University and another similar institution in Latin America or Africa.

(4) REFERRED consideration and study of the dry zone to the standing committee on university administration.

The dry zone was brought up by Tom Herman, who said, "We have a rule being enforced by the administration that I feel is not fulfilling its function."

Senate drops UA in apportionment

Allocation of funds donated to Campus Chest was revised at the ASUO Senate meeting last Thursday.

The reapportionment plan provides that one group from each of five categories will receive 20 per cent of the funds. The categories are education, health and national aid, youth groups, local youth charities, and local adult charities.

Suzanne Brouillard, chairman of the student relations and communication committee which presented the plan, said, "United Appeal was left out because it was not adding to the prestige of Campus Chest."

Last year Campus Chest did contribute to United Appeal.

Miss Brouillard said that Cal Jensen, chairman of Campus Chest, wants to develop Campus Chest as an individual University fund-raising drive, a campus equivalent of United Appeal.

On the motion of Bud Snodgrass, Senate unanimously approved the plan.

'Cherry Orchard' tickets available

Some seats are still available for week-day performances of the University Theatre production, "The Cherry Orchard." Weekend performances through the final performance Saturday, December 3, are sold out.

Mrs. Gene Wiley, business manager of the University Theatre, said this week that tickets are available for evening performances this Monday and Tuesday and for Monday through Thursday, November 28 to December 1.

Tickets may be reserved by contacting the University Theatre box office weekday afternoons after 1 p.m.

A front-page story in Sunday's Register-Guard reported that George Waggoner, 44-year-old dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at the University of Kansas "is likely to be named president of the University... according to board members."

VICE president of the State Board, William E. Walsh, voiced the opinion that "there is no one else ranking quite as high as he (Waggoner) is."

Waggoner said nothing.

Sources supposedly close to the president's office have said that what Waggoner says during the Tuesday interview will be the determining factor of whether or not he will be the University's next president. The job has not been specifically offered to any of the three candidates.

WAGGONER has confirmed that he will be in Eugene Monday night. He has not yet met formally with the State Board. Waggoner has been at Kansas since 1954. He received both his bachelor's and Master's degrees at Kansas. He received his PhD. at the University of Wisconsin in 1947.

University center evaluates child learning problems

An evaluation center for children with learning problems has been established in the University of Oregon's school of education with Robert H. Mattson, assistant professor of education, as director.

The center was established October 1, but became fully operative only recently with the addition of Dr. W. Boyde Berryhill, Eugene pediatrician, to the staff.

Mrs. Evelyn Watson, formerly of the Clark County Medical Health center in Vancouver, is the center's psychological examiner.

The center provides educational diagnostic service for school children, trains students planning to teach, and trains advanced students preparing for positions in school psychological services.

The center will be maintained by cooperative efforts of the University and Oregon State Department of Education.
