

AWS Elections . . .

more cabinet; and Carol Christensen and Nancy Erland, secretary-treasurer.

All candidates will be introduced at the election campaign assembly today at 4 p.m. in the Dad's Room of the SU.

The following is a list of various candidates and a brief statement from each.

AWS candidates for secretary are:

Margot Noall: "In addition to fulfilling the duties of secretary, I would like to clarify and make known the women's rules as well as try to increase the personal contact between AWS legislature and cabinet and the women students so that the opinions of these women can be carefully considered."

Sharon Lay: "As president of Alpha Lambda Delta (freshman women's honorary), I served on AWS legislature and know the problems and potentialities of AWS. As secretary of my senior class at South Eugene High School and as secretary of my pledge class, I know the duties of secretary and would like to handle them for AWS."

Sue Goodnight: "In addition to the set duties of treasurer, I hope to be able to aid the AWS cabinet by means of the contacts I have made through participating in activities on campus both in dormitories and sororities."

Sharon Raynor: "I feel that I have the time necessary to devote to this job in order to do it properly. One of my main objectives would be to make the women on campus more familiar with the functions of AWS and how money is spent by AWS."

Shirlene McMichael: I would like to see the WRA program strengthened through more publicity, including more public relations contact with the students, informing them of the complete WRA program. Incoming freshmen should receive a handbook during the summer concerning WRA activities.

Marianne Foster: "WRA at the University is a growing and functioning organization. Participation has improved in the last year, but it needs to be expanded to all women's living organizations, both on and off campus. WRA offers the needed exercise and activity which is so lacking among University women."

Judy Draiss: "I have worked on YWCA for three years and have served on YWCA cabinet, and I have been membership chairman for the last year. I am well-acquainted with the YWCA problems, the most important of which I feel are membership and publicity. I will endeavor to work in these areas to serve the YWCA."

Gladys Kafoury: "The Y program was set up to serve . . . not only all women on campus, but the world, through the Christian philosophy of love and understanding of others. I would make the student body more aware of the program, have a membership drive, and integrate all girls on campus through an active program."

Oregana Petitions Due March 6

Petitions for Oregana editor and business manager are being called for. They are due in the office of the Student Union Director by 5 p.m. of Monday, March 6.

The Student Union Publications Board will interview candidates for both positions at the meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 7.

Those who wish additional information may contact Ken Metzler in the SU office.

Andrews to Speak On Mayan City Ruin

George F. Andrews, associate professor of architecture at the University, will speak on the recent excavations at Tikal, the largest and oldest of the Mayan cities, today at 8 p.m. in room 106 Lawrence Hall. Slides will be shown.

It is hoped that these excavations will shed new light on the origins and development of Mayan culture.

Andrews has spent the last three summers in Central America visiting over 30 pre-Columbian city sites. He is currently

Kafka, Camus Topic of Lecture

By BARBARA CHANTRY
Emerald Women's Editor

"The incomprehensible remains incomprehensible" in the works of Franz Kafka and Albert Camus" said Heinz Politzer, professor of German at the University of California at Berkeley, in his lecture yesterday entitled, "Kafka and Camus."

In comparing the two authors, Politzer drew from the works of the two authors, primarily The Trial, by Kafka and The Stranger by Camus. In these works he cited the common element of crime and punishment. But this crime and punishment is dealt with differently. In The Trial, K., the principle character, is guilty because he is unable to recognize his own guilt, while in The Stranger a crime is truly committed, but set off by forces beyond the chief character's control.

Politzer opened his lecture with a discussion of Friedrich Nietzsche and the problem which he faces, that God is dead. Politzer noted that this search for God is a 20th century search, one found in the writings of both Camus and Kafka. But whereas Kafka negates God conditionally, Camus re-establishes the human relationship in a universe without grace through human tenderness.

The figure of the physician as a saviour, according to Politzer, has become a leading character in the post-Freudian era. The image of this figure contains hope and promise for mankind. The importance of the physician as a saviour can be seen in Camus' The Plague, and Kafka's, The Country Doctor. It is also a recurring theme in the works of Thomas Mann, and Boris Pasternak. Politzer noted that it was interesting that both Pasternak and Mann won Nobel Prizes for their works which dealt with this subject.

Politzer was born and raised in Vienna and came to the United States in 1949. He received his Ph.D. from Bryn Mawr and has taught at both Bryn Mawr and Middlebury College. He has published 14 articles on Franz Kafka and is considered to be a foremost authority in the U.S.
