

'Sunrise At Campobello' Continues At University Theatre This Week

"Sunrise at Campobello," the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's fight against infantile paralysis, continues its run at the University Theatre this week, March 1, 2, 3, and 4.

TICKETS for the play may be obtained between 1 and 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday at the University Theatre box office, and may be reserved by calling the box office at ext. 441. Tickets are $1.

Starring as Franklin D. Roosevelt in the play is Robert Ericson. Vivian Tendollen portrays Eleanor Roosevelt. Several Eugene children also play as Roosevelt's children.

THE PLAY, written by Dore Schary, describes the 34 months of Roosevelt's struggle with the disease and the effect it had on him and his family. Schary described these months as "a story of challenge and response, or defeat and despair, turned into victory and confidence."

Although Schary's drama has been attacked as propaganda, the author insists that it is not a political play, but rather a simple, true story about a man who happened to be a political figure, a "man who became a leader of this country during some of its worst trials."

LIMERICK

There once was a hermit named Dave
Who took two DQ's to his cave.
"They're not both for me,"
He chuckled with glee.
"I'm living in sin in this cave."
(DQ's are good companions, too)

Advances in Sea May Alter Life For Future

By DAN PFAFF

Emerald Asst. Managing Editor

There are new advances being made under the sea that are going to change our lives," Owen Lee, master diver on the Capt. Jacques-Yves Costeau Calypso Oceanographic Expedition, told Tuesday's University assembly audience.

Lee said Capt. Costeau, who invented the aqua-lung in 1942, sees a number of possibilities for man in the sea in the future years. He suggests, for example, that after undergoing a "minor operation" men will be able to extract oxygen from water just as fish do, and will also be able to breathe in the air.

COSTEAU also sees the day when population increases will squeeze men off the land and onto floating islands, which will drift about the seas allowing men to catch and freeze fish for commercial purposes.

Men on the floating islands will also use herds of trained porpoises and whales to help them round up schools of fish, Costeau has predicted.

Lee said he and members of the expedition he represents are opposed to the "bravado" conceptions of skin diving as a sport in which men see how deep they can go or how many fish they can kill. It is the purpose of the expedition, based in France, to gather information which will be of scientific benefit, he explained.

LEE SPOKE only briefly during the assembly hour. He presented a film, "Exploring Inner Space," in which certain "free diving" techniques were demonstrated.
