

UO profs to attend holiday conference

Ten University faculty members from the departments of English and foreign languages will attend the Pacific Coast Philological Association conference Friday and Saturday. The conference will be held at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

The Philological Association is a group interested in the study of literature and language.

Kester Svendsen, head of the English department, will discuss "Milton as Comparatist." Cristof Wegelin, associate professor of English, will speak on "Notes on the Decline of International Fiction: Hemingway."

Stanley R. Maveety, assistant professor of English, will discuss Doctrine in William Tyndale's "Bible Translation: Its Source and Parallel in Luther's New Testament."

Roland C. Bali, assistant professor of English, will be chairman of the American literature section, and Frederick M. Combella, professor of classical languages, will be secretary of the general and comparative literature section. Combella is on leave from the University, but will return spring term.

Rockefeller friend safe

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI)—A companion of Michael Rockefeller on a headhunter relic expedition in Dutch New Guinea has been rescued. He said he last saw Rockefeller clinging to a makeshift raft and paddling toward the jungle coast 16 miles away.

New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller has arrived in Honolulu en route to join the search for his son. He and the twin sister of 23-year-old Michael will complete the trip in a chartered jet plane.

Committee plans pre-dent address

Representatives of the Admissions Committee of the University Dental School will address all interested pre-dental students at 7:30 tonight in room 123, Science.

The program will include speakers and a question and answer session. All students with questions or those seeking admission to the Dental School next fall are particularly urged to attend.

Private interviews for applicants or prospective applicants will be held between 3 and 5 p.m. today with representatives of the Admission Committee. Those students wishing appointments should contact the secretary at the Biology Office, Room 361, Science.

There will not be a regular series of interviews this year. This will be the best opportunity to ask questions and receive personal contact and attention.

Historical bon mot

G. A. Custer, formerly of the U.S. Cavalry, entertained an informal party of Indians at the Little Big Horn. Seymour Griggs entertained a small party of friends in his apartment. Griggs served DQ's-to-go. Griggs' party was eminently more successful.

If you think these columns are easy to write, you are badly erroneous. Why, for three weeks I've been throwing away columns that just didn't pan out. Here are the beginnings of some columns I have abandoned:

Gregor Samsa awoke from a night of uneasy dreams to find that he had been transformed in his sleep into a giant Dairy Queen...

Four dairy and seven years ago our four fathers brought forth a new Dairy Queen, conceived in goodness and dedicated to the proposition that not all ice creams are created equal...

Now I'm not going to tell you my whole blankety-blank autobiography or anything phony like that, but if you really want to know, my old name is Holden Caulfield and I'm an absolute madman about Dairy Queens...

So much for those. As you can see, they seem to lack originality in one way or another.

Then I decided to write a few limericks. I have never been particularly adept at limericks, but being about 400 years behind the times, I felt that the Universal Man should try everything once. (Unfortunately, it's no longer possible for people to be universal men. You just can't do EVERYTHING these days. For example, General Motors flatly refused to let me design 1984's Cadillacs. The Industrial Revolution delivered the coup de grace to Universal Manhood).

Oh yes, limericks. The following example will show you why I decided not to devote a column to my own limericks:

Jingle bells, jingle bells,
Listen, Orson Wells,
Dairy Queen
is neatsy-keen.
Attend the Sadler Wells.

Obviously, I was already desperate, so I decided to write about my cat, Roger Mosky. I was going to give Roger a Dairy Queen to see if she would eat it. She didn't. She has never seen a Dairy Queen yet, because I couldn't get it to her on my bicycle. I bought a Dairy Queen and was riding home with it on my bicycle, when this little old lady driving a Stutz Bearcat came whizzing around a corner at about 80 miles an hour. I quickly applied my brakes, which are of the hand variety. When the little old lady had gone, pursued by five Eugene police cars and the Campbell Club hearse, I wiped my brow in relief. Then I noticed that I had crushed my Dairy Queen when I applied the brakes. That's right, all over. So I got out my handkerchief and wiped the Dairy Queen off my forehead and drove home. Frustrated, I wrote the following column and went to bed:

Dairy Queens really taste quite good. I personally like them myself and recommend them highly. Roger Mosky probably likes them too.
