with the original papers and filed in departmental files for an instructor's use. A permanent notation would be made on a violator's transcript.

MOST CASES of plagiarism are only referred to the professors who take minor disciplinary action, such as an "F" in the course, commented Mongar. "Very few cases are referred to Ray Hawk, Dean of Men," he said.

Mongar said that he knew of six cases of plagiarism last term in the political science department, three involving freshmen and three involving upperclassmen. Files were used in five of the cases, he said.

MONGAR SAID he does not know how many living organizations possess files. "The resolution may have stimulated the machinery to abolish the files," he observed.

If his resolution does not pass in its present form, Mongar said he will change it in his attempt to prevent plagiarism.

Plagiarism results because students "try to get to the top anyway they can," he said. Files become available for easy copying after a professor leaves the University, and professors make no specified approach to papers, especially book reports, making it easy to plagiarize, he commented.

THERE ARE SEVERAL ways of suspecting plagiarism, according to Mongar. Some of these are if papers are extremely well-written, if there are no quotes or footnotes, and if the paper "dated" by stopping at an earlier date in its analysis.

New York Study Offered for Juniors

Washington Square College is again sponsoring the Junior Year in New York program in 1962-1963.

FOR THE past five years the program has attracted students from colleges and universities throughout the country.

A student participating in this program may enroll in classes of the other undergraduate divisions of New York University in addition to classes in the traditional liberal studies offered by Washington Square College.

STUDENTS must be fully recommended by their deans and have a program of studies planned by their home colleges. Since the cost of the program has eliminated some worthy candidates, New York University will consider modest grants-in-aid on a student's recommendation.

TORTURE—HAH

"We had to give up smothering prisoners in vats of Dairy Queen," said the torturer. "Even guys who didn't know any information at all were claiming they did just so they could get tortured. And besides that, all the guards were defecting so they could be punished the same way. Not that I blame them."

NATO

HAS FAILED TO DO ITS JOB!
NATO is well stocked with nuclear weapons. But its army is so small, says Stewart Alsop, that the Reds could demolish it in weeks. In this week's Post, he tells how NATO is courting disaster. Why our army is full of "civilians in uniform." And how we can offset the Soviet threat by a "balance of terror."
