

Fallout Shelters Feature of Lecture Tonight

"Shelter" will be the Browning Room lecture topic of Franklin W. Stahl, associate professor of biology and research associate in the Institute of Molecular Biology. The speech will begin at 7:30 p.m. today.

STAHL AND George Streisinger, another University biology professor, have published articles and letters on fallout and shelters in recent months in the Eugene Register-Guard. Their views were in opposition to those of the widely-published Willard Libby who has written on the effectiveness of shelters.

In tonight's talk, Stahl will expand his discussion of shelters and the problems that would arise out of nuclear attacks.

A GRADUATE of Harvard University who received his doctorate from the University of Rochester, Stahl has been on the Oregon faculty since 1959. He was a National Science Foundation Fellow at Rochester from 1954-55, and a Research Fellow in biology at California Institute of Technology from 1955-58. In 1958 he went to the University of Missouri as an associate professor of zoology.

Alan W. Roecker, head science librarian at the University, will be the discussion leader for tonight's program.

Committee Chosen To Probe Cheating

University President Arthur S. Flemming has appointed a six-man committee to recommend procedures to deal with cheating at the University.

THE FACULTY Senate disapproved on Jan. 15 an ASUO Senate suggestion which proposed a student proctor plan and a program of action by the Student Discipline Committee. Flemming indicated at the time of the Faculty Senate decision that he would appoint a committee to make new suggestions for solving the problem.

The committee chairman is Kenneth Ghent, associate professor of math. Committee members are Norman D. Sundberg, associate professor of psychology; J. L. Powell, physics department head; Donald A. Watson, assistant professor of finance; Dean of Men Ray Hawk, and Dan Williams, ASUO president.

THE COMMITTEE met for the first time Tuesday for a general discussion. Another meeting is planned for Feb. 8.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission has fired another underground nuclear blast in Nevada. This is the 11th in the current series. The AEC also released its annual report for 1961.

On Sigma Nu Violation

Tribunal Reports Hazing Decision

By PHIL COGSWELL
Emerald News Editor

The Inter-fraternity Council Tribunal's decision on hazing violations by Sigma Nu was made public Tuesday by Dick Sorenson, president of the IFC Presidents' Council.

Included in the decision is the stipulation that if Sigma Nu is found guilty of future hazing offenses the fraternity will be recommended for charter suspension.

Also required is that a national officer of the fraternity visit the University as soon as possible "in reference to the problem of Sigma Nu hazing."

Sigma Nu will not be allowed to conduct an initiation, formal or informal, until "such time that a national officer visits with the chapter, the chapter advisor, the fraternity system and the Student Affairs Office; and until such time that proof has been submitted by Sigma Nu that definite progress has been made towards elimination of this problem of hazing."

World News IN BRIEF

Resolution Approved

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. General Assembly has overwhelmingly approved an Afro-Asian resolution calling for an end to what it termed "repressive" Portuguese measures in Angola. The resolution also calls for independence for the African Colony. The vote followed two weeks of debate on the issue boycotted by Portugal.

Crown Prince Born

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — A crown prince was born Tuesday to Jordan's King Hussein, and his British-born wife.

A REPORT must also be submitted to the Tribunal to the effect that Sigma Nu's "philosophy of initiation complies with the spirit of the hazing measure adopted by the University fraternity system through the Presidents' Council and with the objectives of their national fraternity."

Commenting on the decision, Sorenson stated, "I think this is the most constructive decision the Tribunal has made since I've been here."

DON CLARK, president of Sigma Nu, said that "there will be a great deal of effort to comply with these hazing regulations in the future, as there was this year."

"In our case 61 years of tradition behind fraternity rituals such as this is a pretty tough thing to crack within one year's time," he commented. "A great deal of progress was made not only in our behalf but in all houses."

CLARK SAID that hazing "has had its value in the past," but suggested that "there are other ways besides hazing to accomplish the goals which should be accomplished."

A substitute is in order, he said, "if it is allowed to grow from within the fraternity." He said he believed that hazing would have grown out of the fraternities without outside pressure.

"OUR FRATERNITY and many others should make an effort to explore possibilities," Clark commented. "It is the job of presidents to discuss substitutions for hazing."

Clark also commented on the publicity given the Sigma Nu infraction saying, "I think the Emerald has blown the situation concerning us completely out of scope in its seriousness."

Festival of Arts

Lecturer Cites Faults, Goals of Art Criticism

"Journalistic criticism started in the early part of the 18th Century, when a break came between the artist and his audience and people began to wonder just what Johann Sebastian Bach was doing up there in that organ loft."

And, according to Alfred Frankenstein, art and music critic for the San Francisco Chronicle, people have since that time turned more and more to criticism, because the gap between the composer and his listener and the artist and his viewer has continually grown wider.

"A CONSTRUCTION of words has to close the gap," he said Tuesday afternoon in the opening speech of this year's Festival of Arts program.

Title of his speech was "Criticism: What it is and What it is Not." He was introduced by Wallace Baldinger, professor of art at the University.

Frankenstein said there are two things that criticism definitely is not. First, it is not a science, because the same critical standards cannot be applied to all art. Secondly, he said, it is not a mystery—a field that is or ought to be open only to practitioners.

ON THE contrary, he believes, the capacity that makes a man important in creating art is likely to impose upon him a certain narrowness as a critic of the work of other people.

A good critic, however, he added, is not one who knows nothing about the field he criticizes, but the training of the artist and of the critic are two different things.

He sees certain inadequacies in criticism. In music for instance, he feels that the repertoire is far too small.

"THERE ARE about 50 pieces that everyone plays over and over again, which leaves only one variable to be criticized—the performance. We tend to put too much value on it. It is for me totally insane and monstrously exaggerated."

For the visual arts he cited another problem. "There is an obsession among artists to exhibit the largest amount of work in the smallest amount of space."

This creates a gross unfairness to the artist, he said, "when
