Registration . . .

students. The psychology department moved onto the lawn to facilitate registration. The history department used large classrooms in Commonwealth Hall, and the School of Education, which started sign-ups in its office, also moved into large classrooms Thursday. The foreign language department, working in Friendly Hall, was plagued by congestion in the corridors.

UNIVERSITY President Arthur Flemming, in New York attending the National Council of Churches planning committee, of which he is chairman, commented:

"In the future we will see to it that the registration work load is distributed equally among all the days set aside for registration and is handled in such a manner that those who register on the last day are given just as much consideration as those on the first day."

A SUMMER pre-advising program, begun on a small scale this summer, would bring a substantial majority of freshmen to the campus for counselling and registration before the fall term begins. This year, of course, the 250 freshmen on campus before the beginning of the term were unable to register because a final time schedule had not been made.

University officials indicated that they were working toward a system whereby students could arrive on campus Sunday night and begin classes Monday morning. The system would involve IBM machines and computers, and would be patterned after the registration system at Purdue University, which officials have been studying.
