

Taylor Opens International Series With Movie, Lecture on Australia

Charles Forbes Taylor, world-renowned lecturer, author, and humorist, will present his color motion picture "Australia" at 8:00 p.m. in 150 Science as the opening program in the University series on "The World Around Us."

Taylor will present Australia, which he describes as "the coming country of the continent down under", as a young nation and the home of some ten million people. He explains that while half of its population is found in the six capital cities, it is a land of fertile farms and there is a close affinity between most Australian and the immense land itself.

MANY SEAFARERS, he relates, have been attracted to the coast of Australia. The pastoral empire of inland plains has created a distinct class of farmers, drovers, cowboys, and outdoor workers. At the same time it is a land of expanding industries and big cities.

The people of Australia are distinctive in many ways. They speak English, of a different sort. Their tastes in clothing and food are different. They do not worry too much about politics. These differences, Taylor believes, are due to a land that is new, remote, and widely varied from others.

AUSTRALIANS are strong nationalists, proud of their heritage, with a national addiction to sports. They read books, discuss their neighbors, and work to develop their country's resources and have the desire to share.

Taylor, an American citizen, was born in England. He has lectured for some 40 years and has long done his own photography. His pictures have been used in newspapers around the world. He has been taking movies since 1935 and has filmed many areas of the world.

SEASON TICKETS for the lecture-film series, sponsored by the Movie Committee of the Student Union Board, are on sale at the SU main desk. Prices for the five-program series is $3.00 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Single admissions to the Taylor lecture on Australia will be on sale at the door at $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students.

New Practices In Registration Make It Easier

by JO GRISWOLD
Emerald Staff Writer

Winter term registration figures indicate that total enrollment for the term will probably exceed 9,000 students.

Final registration figure in the 1962 winter term was 8,297, a 6 per cent reduction from the fall term. If this trend is followed this year, registration will total about 9,050 students this winter term. University President Arthur Flemming said that the reduction will probably again be about 6 per cent.

Registration this year began on Wednesday, and by noon Saturday 5,040 students had paid their fees. Because registration was later in the week this year as compared to 1962, more students extended Christmas vacations and will be registering this week. Last year registration began on Tuesday, and by Saturday noon had reached 5,530.

NEW REGISTRATION procedures for winter term worked very well according to Clifford Constance, registrar. Several departments adopted a new method of alphabetical registration.

"McArthur Court worked beautifully," Constance said. "There (Continued on page 7)"

28 NDEA Awards Given to Oregon

The University has been awarded more National Defense Education Act Fellowships for graduate study than any other institution in the nation for the 1963-64 academic year.

TWENTY-EIGHT NDEA Fellowships have been announced by Harry Alpert, dean of the Graduate School. The University's total since the program began five years ago is now 124 fellowships.

The fellowships, awarded through the National Defense Education Act by the United States commissioner of education, are three-year awards which provide the recipient with $2,000 for the first year, $2,200 for the second, and $2,400 for the third. In addition he receives a yearly allowance of $400 per dependent.

The University will receive a $70,000 cost of education allowance annually for the new fellowships.

FELLOWSHIPS in four new programs—two in business administration, two in chemistry, three in comparative literature and four in German—are included in the 1963-64 awards.

Other fellowships in previously approved programs included in the new awards are two in anthropology, three in economics, three in elementary education, four in English, two in geology, two in mathematics and one in physics.

Four of the 16 programs approved in the University's Graduate School under the NDEA were not assigned new fellowships for the coming year, but these four—history, political science, Romance languages and sociology—include previously appointed fellows.

Twenty-two fellowships were awarded to the University for the 1962-63 academic year.

J. B. Hall to Talk On Short Story In Browsing Room

"Radical Short Story, with Examples," will be the opening Browsing Room lecture at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, given by James B. Hall, associate professor of English and well-known Northwest author.

HALL, CREATIVE writing Department chairman, will illustrate his talk with readings from his own writings which include five novels, numerous poems, and short stories. The short stories he will be discussing tomorrow night will appear in his forthcoming book of collected short stories to be published this year.

Hall began his writing career in 1948 and these writings have been published by major anthologies and magazines such as Harpers, Western Review, Epoch, Esquire, and Accent. He has also been a writer-in-resident on a number of university campuses.

A GRADUATE from the University of Miami, at Oxford, Ohio, Hall received his Ph.D. in literary studies from the University of Iowa. He has been director of the University's Summer Academy of Contemporary Arts for several summer sessions and has been responsible for bringing many distinguished writers to the campus.

Following the lecture, Carlisle Moore, professor of English, will lead a discussion.

Flemming Views Budget With Assent, Concern

Arthur Flemming, University president, presented the following statement on Oregon Mark O. Hatfield's proposed budget for the State System of Higher Education in 1963-65 at a press conference Monday:

My observations relative to the Governor's budget proposals for the State System of Higher Education are as follows:

1. I believe that within the $405 million of estimated revenues for the 1963-65 biennium the Governor has made an equitable allotment to the State System of Higher Education. If he had allotted, within the $405 million, additional sums to the State System of Higher Education, I am confident that other essential functions of State Government would have been seriously impaired.

2. The following aspects of the Governor's budget recommendations for higher education are a source of encouragement—

- The recognition of a need for making $45 million available for capital improvements along with what seems to me to be an excellent proposal for obtaining the $45 million, namely, by requesting the voters to authorize the issuance of bonds for this purpose. Although the Governor suggests that this expenditure might be spread over two bienniums he also suggests that the legislature might decide to follow a different policy. If the voters approve the bonding proposal, I believe the Legislature should authorize the use of the full amount in the 1963-65 biennium.

- The recognition of the fact that the student-faculty ratio of 15.9 to 1 which the 1961 Legislature used as a basis for the 1961-63 biennium should be maintained.

- The recommendation that additional funds be made available for summer sessions so as to provide additional opportunities to students who desire to accelerate their programs.

3. The following aspects of the Governor's budget recommendations for higher education a source of concern—

- The recommendation that the Board's figure of $8500 as the average salary to be paid new members of the teaching staff be reduced from $8500 to $7600. I do not believe that the $7600 figure is realistic if the institutions in the State System are to succeed in recruiting superior teachers. If it isn't realistic it means that not as many faculty members can be employed as contemplated by the Governor's budget and this in turn could increase the student-faculty ratio above the level fixed by the 1961 Legislature.

- The recommendation that the proposal of the Board of Higher Education for a 9.12% salary adjustment for faculty in 1963-64 and a similar one for 1964-65 be reduced to 4.96% for both years. This could have a serious impact on the ability of the institutions of higher education to attract and retain superior faculty.

- The recommendation that the Board's request for an additional investment in graduate study and research programs be denied. This will slow down the progress that has been made in these areas and will result in less money coming into the State from outside sources than would otherwise be the case.

- The recommendation that the Board's request for additional funds for the Bureau of Municipal Research and the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Oregon be denied.

4. I recognize that if the budget for the State System of Higher Education is to be increased so as to provide additional funds for the areas which give me concern, it cannot be done within the $405 million of estimated revenues on which the Governor's budget is based. Additional sources of revenue must be found. It is my hope that the discussion which is now taking place relative to the needs of higher education will lead to proposals which will appeal to the Legislature as being feasible for raising additional revenues. Unless this is done the State of Oregon will miss the opportunity of making provision for a high quality education for the students who will be crowding its campuses in the years that lie just ahead.

Teaching Intern Program Inaugurated Here This Year

A teacher internship program, providing able students a year's teaching experience under intensive supervision, is being inaugurated at the University School of Education as a part of the Oregon Program.

THE OREGON Program, an interinstitutional project of the Oregon State Department of Education, is aimed at improving elementary and secondary school instruction and teacher training throughout the state. Eight colleges and universities and 20 local school districts in Oregon are now participating.

The University's internship program is in the preparatory stage during the current year, according to James M. Laing, associate professor of education, who is director of student teachers and intern coordinator.

Beginning in the fall of 1963, approximately 76 interns will be placed in grades one through 12 in the Bethel, Eugene, Roseburg, and Springfield school districts.

Both education majors and liberal arts majors who wish to teach will be eligible for the program. Only students who will have received their bachelor's degrees prior to the beginning of the internship will be accepted.

The program will supplement the traditional teacher training program which now calls for nine hours of practice teaching during the undergraduate student's senior year.

The program will lead to state certification at either the elementary or secondary school level, and students will have the opportunity to complete the major part of their course work towards a master's degree.

Interns will be assigned to a master teacher in the participating school. This teacher will have released time from some teaching duties for the year in order to supervise and assist the interns.

The interns will be fully responsible for their classes in most cases. When opportunity permits districts will be encouraged to place interns in team teaching situations, Laing said.

The intern will be considered an associate on the professional staff of the school and will be paid $3600 a year, about three-fourths
