

Indians To Provide Evening Of Traditional Entertainment

Indian students at the University will observe India Republic Day with a program and celebration at 7:30 p.m., Saturday in the Congregational Church, 1050 23rd Ave. East.

KURIEN CHACKO, Indian Student Association general secretary, said there will be Indian classical dances, folk dances, a fashion show by Indian women, instrumental music, songs, a display of items from India, and short documentary films on India.

This will be the first Cosmopolitan Club "national night" this year. All interested students, faculty members, friendship families, and the public is invited. Refreshments will be served.

THE PROGRAM will commemorate India's declaration of sovereignty Jan. 26, 1950, Chacko said.

He said that the Indian government encourages and gives financial support to folk dancing clubs in India, which seek out and preserve the traditional village dances, such as will be included in the program.

These dances, by both men and women, are hundreds of years old and are still performed in many villages on special occasions. Chacko said that dancers come from throughout India to participate in Republic Day celebrations in New Delhi.

He said the classical dance has great religious symbolism and portrays the social customs of India. "Every movement has a meaning—they speak to you through the dance, an ancient Indian art form."

DANCERS will include Miss Meenakshi Varma, graduate student in economics, Akhila Gopalakrishnan, Indian student attending Oregon State University, and American students who studied classical dance in India.

Instrumental numbers will be played on the bamboo flute, bulbul tharang, an Indian string instrument, and violin, Chacko said.

He said that the fashion show will include styles from different regions in India, as well as the modern style which is worn throughout the country.

Program chairman is Trilok Sindhwani.
