

Foreign Student Mobility Keeps Foundation Active

By THORA WILLIAMS
Associate News Editor

Foreign students are a mobile group—there is continuous turnover as well as growth in number. And this is what keeps the Foreign Student Friendship Foundation constantly active, according to Theodore Stern, associate professor of anthropology, chairman.

THE FOUNDATION arranges an annual welcoming reception, foreign student tours, a farewell banquet for departing students—and probably most important of all it sponsors the Friendship Family program.

Mrs. D. G. Chambers, chairman of this program, attempts to find a local home and family for each foreign student wishing to participate. "Through the family, the foreign student can deepen his acquaintance with American ways," Stern said, "the local citizens have the opportunity to know and appreciate these students and the countries they represent."

STERN SAID there is a waiting list of foreign students. More American families are needed. Those interested may call Mrs. Chambers at DI 4-0530.

The Foundation was organized

14 years ago by University and community people "recognizing there was much that might be done on the non-academic side to give greater meaning to the international experience," Stern said.

"On both sides there is a curiosity about the country and the culture of the other and a desire to present his own land and people in a true light."

PLANS ARE being made for a proposed foreign student trip to Northern Oregon during spring vacation, Stern said. Last year, a bus-load of students from 15 different countries spent four days during spring vacation visiting schools, local industries, and seeing the sights in Southern Oregon.

Stern said that this year it is hoped the foreign students will be able to see the legislature in session in Salem. The tours are arranged in cooperation with the General Extension Division, YWCA and YMCA.

MEMBERSHIP in the Foreign Student Friendship Foundation is in four classes: contributing, $2; sustaining, $5 or more, organization, $10, and student, $1. Activities are planned by the Steering Committee, which meets monthly. Student members of the Steering Committee are Maher Qaddumi, Cosmopolitan Club president, Neil Goldschmidt, ASUO president, and Bill Freck, People to People committee chairman.

Stern said the greatest challenge of the Foundation is to "recognize new needs of the foreign students," the most serious difficulty, "in accepting our own limits, such as financial and in housing," and the greatest satisfaction, "in providing the context for long range friendship that are not bound by oceans or continents."

Stockpiling . . .

paredness programs and production capacity beyond the levels needed to meet the civilian demand, and to reduce time required for full mobilization in event of attack on the United States.

(3) to keep purchases under the Critical Materials Stockpiling Act from invading material quantities needed by current industrial demands.

FLEMMING also considered the critical periods that the United States has found itself in during the beginning of the last two conflicts, when critical substances have been absent in adequate amounts. At these times it was most difficult to divert scarce machinery, equipment, manpower, and armed forces to obtain these materials.

On the question of excess stockpiling of nickel by the United States government—for which the Hanna Nickel Smelting Co. has been sued for $1,564,811—Flemming stated that he had asked Dr. John Townsend to make a study of seriousness in the nickel situation, and to make appropriate recommendations to solve it. During the years 1955-57 he said, nickel was quite scarce, and Townsend advised the Government to increase its supply of wartime and peacetime requirements.

FOLLOWING the receipt of this report, Flemming started discussions on the desirability of increasing the supply of other strategic materials, among them lead. To this period, Flemming said he was given conflicting advice on the advisability of such a program. Various amounts were allocated for military requirements, with many exceeding defense orders.

"HERE WAS A case," he said, "where responsible persons had differing views as to the desirability of setting a higher figure. I decided to use the higher figure because of my belief that it constituted a more realistic reflection of our actual defense needs." He added that, "No one in the Defense Department was able to give me a satisfactory explanation for this gap between estimates and orders."

AS A RESULT, Flemming decided to base his new expansion program around the military requirements, instead of previous estimates. Subsequently, an expansion ensued, from the original amount of 300 million tons of lead to 440 million tons.

Flemming was also against the proposals of the military heads to reduce the amounts of critical materials in 1956. "President Eisenhower concurred in this recommendation," Flemming said, adding that the policy "remained in effect a year or two after he left office."

IN ANSWER to the rubber stockpile problem, Flemming said he was strongly influenced by advice from the State Department that the sale would have had adverse effects on foreign relations with Asian and African countries. He acknowledged that a 1956 memorandum from C. F. Ogden, one of his aides, suggested that it would be no easier to sell surplus rubber two, three or five years later than it was at that time.

PRESIDENT Flemming is expected to return to Eugene by Wednesday evening, after finishing his testimony.

Activities Listed By Cosmo Club

Cosmopolitan Club, University-sponsored international organization, has a full schedule of winter term meetings and programs, and all students, both American and foreign, are welcome, according to Maher Qaddumi, president.

University President Arthur Flemming will speak and meet informally with Cosmo Club Friday, Feb. 1, in the SU. There will also be foreign and American entertainment.

A variety of entertainment by foreign students attending the University will be presented for the high school International Relations League conference Friday, Feb. 8, in the SU Ballroom. A dance with the high school students will follow in Gerlinger Annex.

A program of Korean dances by a touring troupe from Korea will be presented at 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 11, by Cosmo and the SU Board, in the Music Auditorium. Qaddumi said the troupe has received acclaim for performances at other universities and in Korea.

VALENTINE'S Day will set the theme for the Cosmo meeting Friday, Feb. 15. "Boy Meets Girl Around the World"—skits of customs of courtship and romance in various countries will be presented by foreign students.

For the next meeting, Friday, Feb. 22, the YWCA's "Hot Spots" Committee is arranging a discussion of one of the world's crisis areas. Winter term "Grand Finale" will be a get-together of foreign students at the home of Chuck Palmerlee, YMCA executive secretary, Friday, March 1.

Qaddumi said that this schedule is tentative. Foreign or American students wishing to contribute to the programs (talent) or with ideas or suggestions, will be welcomed.

Hatfield Considers Special Session

SALEM (UPI) Governor Mark Hatfield told a news conference in Salem Monday he will consider the possibility of calling a special session of the Legislature if voters reject tax increases expected to be passed in this session.

Hatfield made the comment after he was asked if he agrees with House Speaker Clarence Barton that cutbacks may have to be made in basic school support.

The Governor said if tax increases are turned down, he will first consider cutting back state services and then take up the question of a special session.

The Governor said he will be in a better position to judge the trend of current revenues at the end of this month. He has not yet announced where one-point-seven million dollars in cutbacks announced last week will be made.

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.
Yes—the big thing.
2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.
Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits. I'd like lots of children.
4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.
You're right—you're right!

5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough. I can see it now.
6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.
But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?

7. You sure do. That's why I'm going to work for Equitable. You get all those job advantages—and all the fringe benefits, too.
I admire your thinking.
