

Campus Chest Reaches $200

A Coke 'n Combo will be held in the SU ballroom tonight from 9:45 until 11:45 as a charity dance for the Campus Chest Drive. Closing hours for all University women will be midnight with a "penny a minute" charged for each minute after 11 p.m.

"The Continentals," three Oregon graduates, will provide rock 'n roll music for the dance. Admission is 15 cents per couple and the dress is campus clothes.

JOHN LUVAAS, Campus Chest promotions chairman, said that all women's living organization chairmen should arrange to have money collected during the "penny-a-minute" hour from 11-12 to night.

Luvaas also asked that all living organizations get their money in now in order to see how the different organizations are doing and to encourage overall competition. The names of all contributing living organizations will be posted in the SU.

APPROXIMATELY $200 has been collected toward the goal of $3000 thus far in the drive. Monday night Susan Campbell Hall turned in $46.45; McClain Hall, $39.11; and Watson Hall, $6.68.

Tuesday night the following living organizations turned in these amounts: Alpha Tau Omega, $7.39; Chi Omega, $17.00; Theta Chi, $21.44; McClain Hall, $9.63; Dymont, $5.97; Carson Four, $7.00 and Phi Sigma Kappa, $10.75.

Chairmen of the drive are: Doug Ragen, general chairman; John Luvaas, promotions; Barb Cannon, treasurer; Mike Holt, upper-class men's dorms; Mike Detelson, freshman men's dorms; Sandy Ako and Kathy Lynch, upper-class women's dorms; Pam Bladine and Nancy Collins, freshman women's dorms; Mark McCulloch, fraternities, Sara Richards, sororities and Wendell Wong, co-ops.

LIVING organizations may turn in money they have collected between 6:30-7:30 p.m. every weekday in the special events office of the SU. Off-campus students may contribute to the Campus Chest at the SU or the Co-op.

Several of the projects which have been planned by various living organizations in order to raise money for the drive are: fines for phone calls and letters, charging girls for having dates this weekend, washing cars, and holding "white elephant" sales.

This is the only local charity drive in which the University participates and the money that is collected will go to the Pearl Buck School for Retarded Children, the Eugene Hearing and Speech Center, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.

The Emerald a statement confirming his opposition to Finkbeiner's continued occupation of the foreign student Senate post.

He called upon the opposition to Finkbeiner, whom he identified as Arnold Temu, Kurien Chacko, Maher Quaddumi, and Moto Inagaki, "to make public any statements that they have against Finkbeiner regarding racial issues or any other issues."

"AS THINGS stand now, all these rumors are destroying his reputation, but are helping no specific cause," he added.

Finkbeiner's resignation clears up an issue which the ASUO Senate itself would apparently have been unable to resolve. ASUO vice-president Art Erickson told the Emerald Tuesday that the Senate "has no right to act in this area" under the ASUO Constitution.

ASUO PRESIDENT Neil Goldschmidt said Tuesday night he "wouldn't want to make a statement until I have a chance to talk to Finkbeiner personally."

Goldschmidt said the regular Senate procedure would be followed in naming Finkbeiner's replacement. This involves a call for petitions and interviews with those interested by a Senate committee. Three finalists then appear before the Senate, which chooses the new office-holder.

Sigma Chi Pledges Clean Up School

The Sigma Chi fraternity made the Pearl Buck School an object of the fraternity's traditional "Help Week" last Saturday when 16 members of the pledge class went to the school to clean and wax its interior.

Work specifically done by the pledges was that of waxing floors, washing windows, cleaning and dusting the rooms and basement workshop and sweeping the walks around the school.

Speaking for the group, Mike Brown who participated in the program said: "Not only did I have a good time and get a lot accomplished, but it gave me a more purposeful meaning to initiation."

Charter Flight Correction

The Emerald ran a story in Monday's paper about the Oregon charter flight to Europe which contained incorrect information.

The following information is correct.

THE OREGON charter flight will leave New York for Amsterdam on June 13 and return from Paris on September 8. The cost for the roundtrip is $254.

As was announced at the recent charter flight meeting, there is a possibility of a connecting flight from Portland to New York and New York to Portland, if there are enough people to fill this second flight.

The additional cost to those participating in the original flight will be $156, if the Portland-New York flight becomes possible.

The flight dates and cost remain the same for the New York and Paris departures.

PERSONS who are interested in the Portland flight are asked to contact the International Education Center, 309 SU at Ext. 1838 between 3 and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Participants in the Oregon charter flight who have not made their second payment must do so this week.

Studies Come Second to Snow Monday Night

"The students seemed to be hit with a kind of white madness!" said Miss Hilda Yee, head resident of Hamilton Hall, about Tuesday night's snowfall.

Mid-terms and studying were ignored, as many students poured out of Hamilton and Walton Halls to engage in snowfighting, washing faces in snow, building miniature snowmen, and just good snow fun.

Miss Karmen Dammrose, head resident at Walton Hall, said there was no trouble with the students, just a general sense of enjoyment. However, Miss Yee said that a third floor window was broken at Tingle Hall. The two girl occupants were both in but the curtains were closed, so neither was hurt by the broken glass.

According to the weather station at Mahlon Sweet Airport, Eugene has had approximately 1 inch of snow so far. Occasional snow is expected today, with a chance of freezing rain. High temperature will be 32. The University Physical Plant employees have been busy cleaning off steps and walks, and had encountered no unusual difficulties (or broken legs) as of Tuesday afternoon.

liquidating projects such as dormitories and repay these debts with dormitory fees received. Over 33 million dollars has been borrowed and repaid in this manner.

State system estimates for construction and renovation needed in the near future total 45 million dollars.

THE LEGISLATURE defeated a plan similar to Montgomery's in 1961. "At that time neither educators nor legislators anticipated the big enrollment increases which came in the fall of 1961," he said. "The needs are more apparent now."

"These bonds are extremely desirable, interest rates are low and individuals holding them are not taxed," he commented.

Interest on dormitory construction bonds in 1958 went as low as 2.69 per cent. Interest on other revenue bonds has ranged from 3.145 to 3.784 per cent.

"WE WILL ask the people if we can issue bonds with an interest rate of about 3 per cent," said Montgomery. "If it passes on the referendum, bonds could be sold by the end of March and money would be available immediately."

University President Arthur S. Flemming has favorably commented on the plan as a method of obtaining funds for state system capital construction in a legal and unobjectionable manner.

Montgomery's bill is now being put in final form and will next go before the Ways and Means committee, a joint House-Senate group.

Another plan, recently proposed by Rep. Jon Mosser, (R-Beaverton) and Sen. Alfred N. Corbett (D-Portland), would utilize money to build classrooms which is already available under a program designed to pay for dormitories, student unions and smaller buildings.

USE OF $16 OR $17 from each student's tuition each term would be necessary to cover the repayment of bonds. Some 48 million dollars in bonds is available for buildings under the present bonding arrangement.

Montgomery said this would not conflict with his bill and might be "kind of stretching a point too far."

The plan would mean an increase in student tuition rates if the state would not make the greater money contribution.

Diving Club To Hear Farnsworth

The newly organized University skin and scuba diving club will meet at 8 p.m. today in the Student Union. Guest speaker, Col. Louis D. Farnsworth, Jr., Head of the ROTC Department, will lecture on diving in tropical waters and display some of his specimens.

Under the sponsorship of the SU Recreation committee and with the aid of Farnsworth, the club will carry out its main objective of scheduling regular dives to help newcomers to diving learn more about it and giving experienced divers a chance to participate in the sport.

Farnsworth, who is helping to organize and advise the club, has a great deal of experience in diving and is a member of the White Water Divers' Club of Eugene, the National Association of Underwater Instructors and president of the Oregon Skindivers' Council.

Club president, Lee Ziegler said new members are welcome. For further information contact Thomas Glueck, publicity chairman.

Student Published In Poetry Works

Rafael Jesus Gonzales, a graduate student at the University, has been notified that several of his poems have been selected for publication in the 1962 "Texas Poets' Anthology" and in "Treasures of Parnassus, Best Poems of 1962."

Gonzales, from El Paso, Texas, is a National Defense Education Act Fellow in contemporary literature.

and Humphrey were long time personal friends of E. R. Lovell, president of Calumet & Hecla, which contracted in 1953 to supply some 146 million pounds of copper for the defense stockpile.

BECAUSE A civilian copper shortage developed later and the contractor was shut down by a strike, Flemming said that both Weeks and Humphrey as well as Calumet & Hecla officials contacted him numerous times urging a revision of the contract.

Coburn, producing memoranda from files of both the copper firm and the government, contended that the contractor was given "special treatment" and "special concessions" after it was in default on stockpile deliveries.

Flemming said this was true, but he insisted that his decision in July, 1955, to ignore past defaults and stretch out future delivery was proper as part of the effort to build up necessary supplies of copper and other strategic materials.

...something a little less serious by ted mahar

Advice to the Loveworn by Ted Goodheart

In my never-ending efforts to help my fellow man, I have decided to help people solve their problems. This, as you will have to admit, is extremely nice of me. If you ever have any problems, just ask me what to do. Send them in care of the Emerald.

And now to this week's problems:

Dear Ted Goodheart:

My problem is that I am going with a married man. He has promised to divorce his wife, whom he hates, and marry me. He loves me more than life itself. He has told me so. My problem is that he has still not started divorce proceedings. He is so wonderful and kind that he does not want to hurt his wife. I know because he told me so. I realize that my problem is very unique, but I hope you can help me. I have been going with him for seven years.

Esther Phester

My Dear Miss Phester: You are right. Yours is a unique problem. I must admit that in all my years of counseling, I have not encountered such an unusual problem. My only suggestion is that you remain loyal to your lover and have faith in him. Faith is a wonderful thing. If you only have faith you will be rewarded. Stick by your man. He needs help in this time of emotional turmoil. It is a terrible thing to be driven by two noble, but conflicting motives.

Dear Ted Goodheart:

My husband's mother is constantly finding fault with the way I do things around the house. She lives with us in married students' housing and criticizes me for sloppy housework, even though I am an excellent housekeeper. In fact, I am constantly picking up after her. She also criticizes me for the way I am bringing up our daughter, even though she slips the child cigarettes when I am not looking. She also criticizes me for interrupting my husband's study by talking, even though, through a congenital defect, I cannot raise my voice above a whisper. My husband takes neither side, but says we should work this out between the two of us. What should I do?

Mrs. Simon Pure

My Dear Mrs. Pure: The next time your mother-in-law starts picking on you, slug her with a flat-iron. It is the surest path to domestic tranquility.

Dear Ted Goodheart:

My husband has been stepping out on me for seven years. It has been with the same idiot all seven years. He keeps saying she is a good kid and that he wants to let her down easy. What should I do?

Mrs. Elsie Grunion

My Dear Mrs. Grunion: Stick by your husband. Have faith in him. He is going through a period of emotional turmoil. It is a terrible thing to be driven by two noble, but conflicting motives.

Dear Ted Goodheart:

Where can I buy the best ice cream there is?

Norman Vincent Sturdley

My Dear Mr. Sturdley: I'm glad you asked me that question. It just so happens that the best ice cream you can buy is Dairy Queen. The Dairy Queen store is at 13th and Hilyard. Faith is a wonderful thing.
