

Apartment Rule Discussed At AWS, YWCA Open Forum

The apartment rule was the main topic of discussion by AWS and YWCA candidates for office in a forum Tuesday.

Pat McCorkle, candidate for AWS vice president, said that she felt that the apartment rule should not be completely abolished. "Something should be changed, though," she said. She went on to say that discussion between faculty and students, not polls such as the one recently taken, is the step to effective action.

KIT THORPE, candidate for YWCA secretary, said that the apartment rule must stand because the administration is responsible for the action of the students, and they must have a basis for their actions. "I feel that they really don't care if students other than freshmen obey the rule or not. I don't think it is as big a problem as they are making it," she said.

"There is no sense of having a rule that can't be enforced," said Nancy Erland, who is running for AWS vice president. She went on to say that the rule would not be effective unless "apartments were patrolled."

EXPRESSING her views of AWS and the Legislature, AWS presidential candidate Joan Yasui said that the representation in the Legislature should be readjusted so that the women were equally represented. She pointed out that the president of Heads of Houses, who has one vote in Legislature, represents all women living in sororities, dormitories and co-ops. Kwama president, she said, also has one vote, and she represents only 35 girls.

Kit Thorpe, candidate for YWCA secretary, said that the YWCA cannot effectively play its role on the campus unless women are informed of its activities. She feels that informal discussion carried on a door-to-door basis in the dorms would be effective, although time consuming.

DISCUSSING the effectiveness and role of AWS, Pat McCorkle said, "The women don't know what AWS has power to do. We must get the point across to them."

Jane Capito, candidate for AWS historian, said that AWS can only inform the women of its role by person to person contact.

Nancy Wohlford, YWCA presidential candidate, explained her theory: "We must define our position and the purpose of the organization in order to find our real job." She proposed a general meeting open to all women students once a month in order to let the women know what the groups representing them are doing.
