

Flemming Sends Letter to Out-of-Staters

COMPREHENSIVES start Saturday and all the Honors College students are studying intensively. Well, all except these, maybe.

Soto-Seelig Elected Prexy At Regional NSA Meeting

By RON COWAN
Emerald News Editor

Raul Soto-Seelig, ASUO Senator-at-large, was elected president of the National Student Association for the Greater Northwest region this weekend at the NSA regional convention in Seattle.

Soto-Seelig will no longer be a candidate for University delegate to the NSA summer convention due to his election. This will leave six candidates for five positions in the election next Monday and Tuesday.

SOTO-SEELIG and three other candidates, Judie Scrivner, Mike Gannon and Howard Liebreich, attended the convention although all candidates were given the chance to attend. The other candidates are Pam Pashkowski, Mike Ellmaker, and Jerry Rust.

Due to Soto-Seelig's new position, NSA regional affairs will be conducted on the University campus with an office probably in the Student Union. Oregon, Washington, Alaska, western Montana, and northwest Idaho comprise the Greater Northwest region.

THE NSA regional treasury will also be located on campus and all national information for the Greater Northwest region will be transmitted through the campus. The office is expected to be established here next fall.

Soto-Seelig has appointed Gary Newton as the regional co-ordinator.

Howard Liebreich was elected chairman of the educational affairs committee at the convention and Judi Scrivner was appointed recording secretary. Mike Gannon campaigned for the position of chairman of the educational affairs committee, but was not elected.

Attention Senators

All ASUO Senate members are requested to be in the Emerald office Friday at 2:30 p.m. for photographs. The Emerald will run pictures of senators next week.

COMMENTING on his new office, Soto-Seelig said "I believe a lot can be accomplished for USNSA at the campus level and at the regional level with the cooperation of other schools."

Soto-Seelig also commented that opponents of NSA who said the University would take five or six years to become actively involved in its affairs, were proved wrong.

Another delegate, Miss Scrivner, commented that "The students were underestimating Oregon prematurely. They shouldn't be now."

IT IS NOT known whether the next regional or national NSA conventions will be held at the University, but Liebreich said there is a possibility the regional convention will be held here.

The delegates also joined in revising the NSA Constitution for the Greater Northwest. Three main revisions were made along with several minor ones.

One revision involved changing the basis for votes at the regional convention from a standard basis of two per school to a population proportion on basic policy questions.

PREVIOUSLY each school had two votes, whereas they will now have two votes each for the first 5,000 students represented, with the amount increasing proportionally to a limit of four.

The change will give the larger schools more power in all areas except the area of structure where they will all have two votes each, according to Soto-Seelig. He helped sponsor this revision.

Another major change is an enabling clause which replaces a ratification clause. This change was proposed by Soto-Seelig.

ANOTHER proposal resulted in the creation of five committees, one being the educational affairs committee. The committee will be concerned with higher education, according to Liebreich.

The new constitution was approved by the convention. Any school which wants to vote against the new constitution must indicate so before the next NSA regional convention.

The delegates also heard two speakers, Deb Daws, former general secretary of the Federation

Press Conference

Flemming Discusses Discipline. Finances

President Arthur S. Flemming indicated at his Monday press conference that he would release today a policy statement on the amended motion of the faculty committee on student discipline concerning a code governing student conduct.

The motion was made at the May 8 faculty meeting and was referred to an editing committee for wording.

Flemming said three faculty members and two students will devise a code this summer in accordance with the new discipline policy. He said this code would be referred to the faculty in October for possible further revisions.

Flemming also said, "The picture on the situation of academic buildings is beginning to clear up."

He said that it seems likely that the state legislature may propose using both state general funds and state obligation bonds to pay for State System of Higher Education academic buildings in the 1963-65 biennium.

Although this would mean a six to eight months' delay in starting such construction as the library and science building additions, the president said the delay would make clear "how the State of Oregon is going to finance academic buildings."

UNTIL NOW such construction has been paid from state general funds. The general fund has money to cover only about $10 to $12 million worth of such buildings in the coming bienni-

Fee Remissions Program Explained

All out-of-state students at the University Monday morning received letters from University President Arthur S. Flemming assuring them the University would do everything it could to meet any financial problems caused by an increase in tuition.

By action of the State Board of Higher Education and the Legislature, in the 1963 fall term, tuition for out-of-state students will be increased to $900 a year, compared to a previously scheduled rate of $690. This compares to the present rate in the current academic year of $630, and for Alaska-Hawaii students $300 a year.

WITH HIS letter, President Flemming enclosed a statement concerning a fee remission program for undergraduate students from other states who need financial assistance.

Under the program, out-of-state undergraduates may apply on or after today for fee remission, and if a faculty committee determines that the applicant is making normal progress toward graduation and if it concludes that he is in need of financial assistance, it will approve a fee remission in an amount related to demonstrated need.

Students may continue to file until the time school starts next fall, but if the funds available should be depleted, those with applications made before September may have a better chance than later ones.

"IF YOU need financial assistance because of the increase in tuition for students from other states, I hope that you will pick up an application blank at the Office of Student Affairs on or immediately after Tuesday afternoon, May 14," President Flemming wrote.

The University will do everything it can to process applications quickly, and hopes to be able to inform applicants of its action on individual cases before the end of the current spring term.

"I HOPE that you will withhold any decision based on financial considerations until you hear from us," President Flemming continued.

"If you have any questions relative to the procedure or criteria that are to be applied in connection with the fee remission program for out-of-state students, I hope you will plan to attend a meeting that I am calling for 4 p.m., Wednesday, May 15, in 150 Science. At that time I will do my best to respond to any questions that you or others may desire to address to me," he said.

Under the fee remission program, ordinarily the maximum fee remission will be $90 a term, which is the amount of the increase over the fee charged for the 1962-63 academic year.

BUT IN the case of students from Hawaii and Alaska, ordinarily the maximum fee remission will be $200 per term, which is the amount of the increase over the fee charged students from those two states during the 1962-63 academic year.

Fee remissions above these maximum amounts, however, may be authorized in hardship cases.

Continuation of fee remissions from one term to the next within an academic year will depend on students making normal progress toward graduation.

Priority consideration for fee remission will be given to present undergraduate students. If at any point it is determined that the total amount available for fee remissions is not adequate for all the undergraduate students who have applied, priority consideration will be given to students whose cumulative grade average is 2.5 (half way between a C and a B) or above.

PROSPECTIVE undergraduates from other states will also be given consideration for fee remission, provided that those students entering as freshmen have a cum-
