News of the Week in Review

News of the Week in Review is an interpretive analysis of the news of each week; and is not intended to be an editorial. It is planned to bring out the significant events of the past week and place them in the proper perspective since they are so often ignored or lost in the crush of other news. This weekly column, appearing on Mondays, is written by the editors of the Emerald.

Discipline Decision

Probably the most significant aspect of last week's news in terms of long range influence on the University was the faculty motion recommendation on student discipline. The University faculty released their decision to approve an amended form of the Student Discipline Committee's majority report.

The faculty motion is based on the premise that the future affect on higher education will be since there has been so little action in an already lengthy session, but the future still looks somewhat dubious.

The motion sets down guidelines which will aid an ad hoc committee in drafting a new discipline code during the summer. The faculty report also recommends the creation of a new student-faculty committee which would be available for appeals. President Flemming will use the report in preparing a statement of policies which are to be operative during the 1963-64 academic year.

An Emerald editorial appearing on Friday said that the faculty motion is very similar to the majority report. The editorial stated further that "it (the faculty motion) is a clear rejection of the in loco parentis approach which has traditionally governed the discipline system."

The report says the primary guiding principle should be the fulfillment of the most essential functions of a university "are the intellectual development of its members and the advancement of knowledge."

The purpose of the discipline evaluation is to realign student discipline system along with the objectives of the University. An Emerald editorial concluded that the faculty action will provide "for a new system under which the objectives of the University will carry through to both the student and classroom."

Building Program

A major decision with important implications for Oregon college students was made in the state legislature last week as the Ways and Means Education subcommittee approved a building program of $44 million for the next two years.

This amount would be used for capital construction in the higher education system and, if approved by the legislature, would mean library and science additions and alterations for the University and major building work throughout the state system.

The Joint Ways and Means subcommittee's action was pleasantly surprising and, as Chancellor Roy Lieuallen commented, "they went further in appropriating money than I expected."

Out of the total $44 million approved by the subcommittee, $24 million would be from the general fund or bonding and $20 million would be from self-liquidating projects paid for out of student fees and tuition hikes.

This action must yet be approved by the entire Joint Ways and Means Committee and the House and Senate of the legislature, but it appears to be a significant indication of a favorable future for higher education building. There are still many undecided questions which may change this, however.

Chancellor Lieuallen mentioned three major "ifs" involved in the subcommittee's action: first of all, the $30 million bonding plan must be approved by the voters; second, the future of the federal aid to education plan pending in Congress may have a significant effect; and third, the legislature's tax program may have to win the approval of the people which could mean the loss of $12.5 million for higher education if they oppose it.

Lieuallen also presented a plan to the subcommittee which would increase scholarships for Oregon residents from 2½ per cent to 3 per cent of total enrollment to make up for higher tuition fees. The proposal would raise the state's cost in this area by 20 per cent, or $108,320.

The chancellor's plan appeared to have definite advantages in the face of an increased number of students needing financial help. Lieuallen commented however, that "I'm not very hopeful that they will increase the amount."

Chancellor Lieuallen's comments raised interesting questions on such aspects as federal aid to education, and the importance of other legislative action yet to be taken. It is hard to foresee at this point what the future action on higher education will be since so little action in an already lengthy session, but the future still looks somewhat dubious.

NSA and Co-ops

In the wake of the constitutional changes approved by the ASUO Senate May 9, Co-op Senator Paul O. Cormier successfully circulated a petition to place the question of an additional co-op representative on the general election ballot, May 27. The new Senate apportionment plan calls for representatives to give equal representation to all types of living groups, rather than being based on population figures.

Under the changes approved by the Senate, co-ops would be the only type of living group with only one Senate representative.

The long-awaited constitutional revisions will appear on the same ballot which will elect the University's five delegates to the USNSA convention this summer. Raul Soto-Seelig, a one-time contender for one of the positions, withdrew from the race after being elected regional president at the Seattle NSA conference last weekend.

Soto-Seelig will automatically attend the convention as president. Interest in NSA seems to be lagging as only six candidates petitioned for the five positions. Further lack of interest seemed evident when only ten people attended a forum given by candidates last week.

Educational TV Budget Reduced

SALEM—A plan to change the policy and reduce the budget for the state's educational television was approved last week by the Ways and Means Education subcommittee.

THE BUDGET, $906,900, is $57,100 less than what the governor proposed. Also, $70,000 of the sum approved by the subcommittee would be available only if the higher education system, the education department, or local school districts put up $2 for $1 of state money.

The move was sponsored by Rep. Stafford Hansell (R-Hermiston) with most of the budget figuring by Rep. John Mosser (R-Beaverton).

Mosser said the budget should encourage the state's school and college systems to take part more seriously in educational television.

UNDER THE approved plan, $696,000 would go to the general extension division of the State System of Higher Education and would be used for cultural and general education TV and radio.

Another $80,000 would go to the Department of Education and $80,000 to the State System.

The committee members also indicated that they may also approve $101,000 in state matching funds to construct the proposed Mary's Peak broadcasting facilities which would increase the range of ETV farther up the Columbia River.

MOSSER suggested that some of the agency money also be used for experimentation with closed-circuit television for classrooms.

The subcommittee abandoned a proposal to put educational television and radio under an independent council and decided to leave it under higher education, where it is a semi-independent branch.

Salaries . . .

The governor's budget carried $2,400,000 for the one-step increase and reduced the Board's request for $5,500,000 to $2,000,000, an amount which is about $500,000 less than estimated by the board to maintain the present lower competitive level. The total salary increase recommended by the governor is $4,400,000.

THE WAYS and Means Committee approved $3,900,000, which is $500,000 less than the governor recommended.

In earlier action, the Ways and Means Education Subcommittee reduced by about 100 the number of academic staff, and reduced the total salary budget approved by the governor $1,700,000. This was the ratio change from 16.1 to 17.0.

The governor's budget, by establishing a hiring average for new staff at $7,600 per staff member, rather than at the $8,500 present average requested by the board, had already reduced the Board's budget by $500,000.

PE Staff Members Elected to Offices

Three members of the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation faculty have been elected to offices of the Northwest District Association of the American Association for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation.

Elections were held at the annual meeting of the Association in Missoula, Mont., April 28-30.

Professors Disagree On Discipline Action . . .

what they cannot do, but at the university level it should be of an exemplary nature, in that students are told what is expected of them, and disciplined when they do not meet these expectations.

The text of the motion adopted by the University faculty on May 8 is as follows:

MOVED: (1) That the faculty approve recommendations numbered 1 through 5 (as set out below) of the report of the Student Discipline Committee as the basis for a code governing student conduct. In the formulation and administration of rules of conduct on the basis of these recommendations, the primary guiding principle should be the fulfillment of the most essential functions of a university, which are the intellectual development of its members and the advancement of knowledge. The faculty recognizes that the recommendations of the Student Discipline Committee represent desirable goals rather than absolute standards, and that to approach these goals will require repeated revision of rules and adaptation of practices in the light of changing conditions affecting the social responsibility and maturity of students. The faculty recognizes further that the student body of the University has come to include persons of widely differing ages and circumstances, for many of whom the University has special responsibilities in varying degrees, and that no one simple set of rules can apply to problems arising, for example, among freshmen and graduate students, or among students who live in housing owned by the University and those who live in privately owned quarters outside the University's jurisdiction.

(2) That a faculty-student committee be appointed to develop within the framework of the policy established by recommendations 1-5 a code governing student conduct and to specify procedures for administering such a code.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1: When student conduct directly and significantly interferes with the basic purposes of the University, the University appropriately may impose disciplinary sanctions.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 2: The University should distinguish its proper disciplinary responsibilities from the control functions of the larger community. This means that the student should be directly answerable to the community for violations of its required code of conduct. The University, in turn, should exercise its disciplinary powers only when the student's conduct directly and significantly interferes with the accomplishment of the University's goals.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 3: The approach to the regulation of student conduct should be based on the premise that the development of responsible behavior is most effectively realized by policies that encourage independence and maturity.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 4: The rules applying to the conduct of female students should not impose greater restraints than those that apply to the conduct of male students. In the imposition of sanctions affecting conduct of male and female students, general principles of equity should be recognized.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 5: Actions taken by the Office of Student Affairs in its administration of the code governing student conduct should be subject to review by the Student Discipline Committee or a specially constituted student-faculty committee. When representatives of the Office of Student Affairs impose the sanctions of expulsion, suspension, blocked registration, or "informal" requests that a student leave the University, an appeal to the Student Discipline Committee or to a specially constituted student-faculty committee should be available on the initiative of the student or of the committee. The student should have the right to the services of a member of the faculty as lay counsel.
