New Code Working

Court Studies Traffic Problems, Rules

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a two part article concerning the University's new traffic court, and parking regulations. It was written from information submitted by Mike Detlefsen. The second article will cover other parking regulations.)

The University's new traffic court, established by the recently approved discipline code, is already in operation and studying the University traffic situation.

The court takes over the responsibilities of the Campus Planning Committee involving campus parking. They will rule on petitions appealing traffic tickets, and make recommendations on future parking facilities among other duties.

Five students, recommended by ASUO President Phil Sherburne and appointed by University President Arthur Flemming sit on the committee. Francis Nickerson, associate dean of students, is a non-voting adviser of the group.

Appointed for Two Years

Members are Roger Qualman (chairman); Mike Detlefsen; Pam Humphreys; and Jeff Wycoff. The fifth member has not been appointed yet. All are sophomores and will serve for two years.

The traffic court can also recommend to the physical plant any changes in the University traffic situation. With the new court, the faculty will have no vote on traffic regulations although they will do administrative work.

Court Decides Cases

Students may petition the student traffic court for the waiver of any University ticket which they feel is unjust. Petitions must be received within five days of the ticket date at the University business office or at the physical plant office.

Guilt or innocence will be decided by the court. After orienting themselves to traffic rules at the first meeting, the Traffic Court studied petitions appealing traffic fines at the second. Later this month they will study the campus parking situation. The physical plant distributed about 18,000 copies of the parking regulations, but the court is receiving petitions for waivers of tickets which are clearly against these regulations.

Safety Promotion

Enforcement of University Parking regulations is not intended to make money, but to prevent traffic congestion, and preserve a margin of safety on campus.

The first duty of a car or scooter owner is to register his vehicle

Colleges to See $19 Million Cut

Somehow the $404 million general fund budget must be cut to $358 million. How much of this cut education will have to bear is still unknown.

The State Department of Finance and Administration has tentatively planned to reduce by $6,196,214 the Board of Higher Education budget of $80,000,283 set by the Legislature.

It also plans to cut $37,364 from the $533,770 budget of the Scholarship Commission.

There is still unspent money for a Portland State College science building appropriated by the 1961 legislature. Gov. Mark Hatfield wants to stop the construction and use the money for this biennium.

The governor also wants to eliminate some $10 million for building construction for the 1963-65 biennium.

The State Department of Finance and Administration has also cut $1,350,000 for aiding com-

Mandolin Concert Set for Tonight

A full orchestra featuring mandolins will appear at 8 p.m. today in McArthur Court when the Japanese Mandolin Orchestra makes its first University appearance.

The program will include Italian classics, semi-classics, folk-songs, Latin, European, American, and Japanese music.

The orchestra is made up of several sections, including first and second tenor, contralto, guitar, cello, and double-bass. There are also flutes, clarinets, and percussion instruments.

Because the United States has no mandolin orchestras, the group was brought to this country by the Society for International Cultural Exchange. The orchestra hopes to promote understanding and international friendships and to increase American familiarity with mandolin music. In Japan, the mandolin orchestra is an extremely popular form of music.

Tickets for the concert are on sale at the main desk of the SU and at the Mattox Pipe shop. Price is $1. The concert is being sponsored by the SU Board.

Senator Disputes Constitution Vote

By RON COWAN
Emerald News Editor

ASUO Senator-at-large Raul Soto-Seelig has charged that the recent ASUO Senate vote on constitutional revisions was unconstitutional, and is working to have the matter reconsidered by the group, possibly preventing its appearance on the Oct. 30 ballot.

Soto-Seelig is requesting a special Senate meeting to approve appointments to the constitutional committee. The committee would then rule on the constitutionality of the vote.

ASUO President Phil Sherburne, who has called the move

"a delaying action," said Sunday that he had not appointed anyone to the committee yet.

If the move is ruled unconstitutional, then the question of revision will not appear on the general election ballot.

Sherburne said he could not make any decision on the matter until he conferred with ASUO Vice-President Bruce McKeel who was still out of town Sunday night. He expressed doubt, however, that a special Senate meeting will be called.

He anticipated that the vote will go as planned, but said this is not definite.

Senator Walks Out

The Senate voted, 12-6, Thursday night to present several constitutional revisions to the student body in the Oct. 30 general election. Soto-Seelig walked out of the meeting in protest after the vote.

Technically the Senate vote could be considered unconstitutional since a two-thirds majority of the Senate membership is required to approve motions involving constitutional amendments. Total membership at the time of the vote was 22 with 10 offices remaining vacant until the general election.

Soto-Seelig said during the meeting that the 12-6 vote was not sufficient to have the revisions placed on the ballot. Sherburne said this wasn't the case since the Senate had approved each of the revisions by a two-thirds majority last spring. Soto-Seelig was ruled out of order.

Asks Special Meeting

Sunday the senator presented a letter to Sherburne requesting that he "call for a special ASUO Senate meeting to receive approval of your appointments to the constitutional committee."

"The Constitutional committee has a request to rule unconstitutional the action taken by the ASUO Senate regarding the placement of a set of constitutional amendments on the ballot."

"I urge you to call for the special meeting at once. If the constitutional committee cannot meet

Immunizations Set For Students, Staff

Immunization shots for influenza will be given this Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Students may receive their shots all three scheduled days, but staff members and employees must get theirs on Thursday and Friday only.

The shots are $1. Students' fees will be taken from their breakage deposits. Students should bring their student body cards to the infirmary. The staff and the employees must pay cash.

Budget Committee Studies Fund Cuts

Conjecture on possible cuts in University budgets was made in Saturday morning's meeting of the Student Union and Educational Activities Budget Committee.

No definite action can be taken by the budget committee until the State Board of Higher Education is able to give further direction to the University. The State Board will meet Oct. 28 and 29.

The discussion of allocations is a result of the defeat of the Oct. 15 tax referendum.

Talk at the budget board principally centered around whether a decrease in the budget would best be met by an increase in income or a decrease in expenditures, according to A. L. (Si) Ellingson, Student Union director.

He said that after budgets were made last spring most committee members felt that if any more money were cut out some programs would be eliminated.

No single line items, which would involve specific programs, were discussed at Saturday's meeting.

The budget committee will meet 8 a.m. Oct. 31.
