

Fixman to Accept Award As Outstanding Chemist

Marshall Fixman, director of the Institute of Theoretical Science at the University, will formally accept an award as the nation's outstanding young chemist Jan. 20 at the 146th national meeting of the American Chemical Society in Denver.

The Oregon scientist was named winner of the ACS Award in Pure Chemistry at the last ACS meeting in New York in September.

After the formal presentation of the award, which consists of $1,000 and a certificate, Fixman will deliver a special award's address to the meeting on Jan. 22.

He is one of several members of the University department of chemistry who will be participating in the meeting.

• LeRoy H. Klemm, professor of chemistry, is co-author of two papers to be presented detailing the preparations of chemical compounds to be tested for their possible cancer-causing properties.

He was assisted on the first paper by Ernst Huber, former research assistant, and Charles E. Klopfenstein, present graduate student and research assistant.

Principal author of the second paper is Annekate Weisgert, postdoctoral fellow and research associate.

Claibourne Smith, research assistant, will read a paper, co-authored with Virgil Boekelheide, professor of chemistry, on the synthesis of an organic compound called 2H-benz(c,d)azulene.

Richard D. Burkhart, postdoctoral fellow and research associate, will report on his work on "Diffusion Controlled Termination in Free Radical Polymerizations."

Richard M. Noyes, head of the chemistry department, will attend the meeting in his capacity as a member of the executive committee of the ACS Division of Physical Chemistry.

Also attending the meeting will be Lloyd J. Dolby and Thomas W. Koenig, both assistant professors of chemistry.

Former Ambassador To Address Assembly

Sir Richard Allen, a British career diplomat who was ambassador to Burma from 1956 to 1962, will address a University Assembly Thursday.

He will speak on "The Colonial Aftermath and Problems of Western Diplomacy in South East Asia" at 1 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

Sir Richard has been in diplomatic service for England since 1925, when he was appointed a junior assistant secretary to the Government of Palestine, Jerusalem. Previously he had been educated at New College, Oxford, receiving his baccalaureate and master's degrees in modern history.

He was appointed to the British Foreign Service as Third Secretary in 1927 and since that time has served for his government in Japan, Switzerland, Chile, Colombia, Poland, Argentina, and Guatemala.

In 1946 he was promoted to counsellor and appointed head of South East Asia Department of the British Foreign Office. Subsequently he visited India, Burma, Indonesia, Indochina, and Thailand. He retired in 1962.

Sir Richard was appointed Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in 1960. In 1962 he was awarded a Chubb Fellowship at Yale University. He was Regents' Lecturer at the University of California in Los Angeles last October. Currently, Sir Richard is visiting professor of history at the University of Washington's Institute of Russian and Far Studies.

Sir Richard is making his second speaking visit to the University. He was the keynote speaker at the University's Pacific Northwest Assembly on Cultural Affairs and Foreign Relations, held last summer.

a valuable function for publicizing campus activities.

Donald DuShane, another board member, said The Emerald is not a "sacred cow," but has already made some economies. Ellingson noted that costs on The Emerald are already lower than similar college publications such as the Oregon State newspaper, The Barometer. He said that if it had not been for the loss of the cigarette ads, they would only be subsidizing the overhead.

It was suggested that the Northwest Review lose its fourth issue this year, but this was rejected due to obligations already incurred. Jones commented that "I'm beginning to doubt any reason why students should continue to support it," since it lacks wide appeal and publishes little student work.

The Board voted to give the publication one year's notice of withdrawal of support.

Discussing the publication's budget, Jones explained that publications were originally subsidized for $19,999, but a cut of $4,300 was requested by the budget board. The Publications Board, however, asked for $20,762 to meet losses resulting from the loss of cigarette advertising in The Emerald.

Greater Oregon, which lost its entire budget this fall, due to the tax defeat, was voted $300 on the recommendation of the ASUO Senate. This could cover the speech team, informational material for high schools, and other expenses. Salaries are not included.

This money is to come from the $1,000 originally provided for World Affairs Week, which only used $176 of that amount. One hundred and fifty dollars more of this amount has been spent on arrangements for the speech of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, according to board member Phil Sherburne.

Also voted for was $250 for a new door to the Student Union's Director's office.

The $1,300 cut in the programs budget was made "without any impairment of existing programs," said Ellingson. The $800 cut from debate and $500 music in four plans.

Ellingson commented that many cuts are not now possible since debts have already been incurred on many programs and the budget board is not free to look at all areas until next year. Proposed budgets will be heard again in April.

Board members questioned several items in the Student Union budget, which was cut 10.8 per cent or $2,014.72 from the original appropriation. The new total is $16,646.98. Items removed include the chess exhibition, ski trips, Oregon Award for Creativity, and jazz festival. Other cuts were made in existing programs.

The Budget Board voted to establish a subcommittee under board members Steve Goldschmidt and George Robertson to review student salaries.

Present at the meeting were members W. C. Jones, chairman; Donald M. DuShane (ex officio); A. L. Ellingson (ex officio, non-voting); and student members Steve Goldschmidt, George Robertson, Phil Sherburne, and Jerry Utti.
