

Sabin Replies to Co-op Letter

By THORA WILLIAMS
Feature Editor

Vic Sabin, "Save the Side" leader, replied Monday to a letter sent by the Co-op Board telling the Co-op version of the Willcox building events and urged members to vote for the building's demolition.

Membership receipts must be presented to vote at the meeting, 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Union.

Purchase in 1955

The Willcox building, housing the College Side Inn, was purchased in 1955 as a site for future expansion. The trouble started when the Co-op attempted to make "this dream of a new building a reality" and, in 1963, ordered demolition of "the hazardous Willcox building," according to the Co-op letter, signed by Dick Imwalle, president of the board of directors.

Sabin, former University student, has spearheaded a drive to save the building because of its traditional and unique architecture.

The Co-op letter stated that Sabin, last summer, led an attempt to "take advantage of the slight summer enrollment by calling a special meeting of the membership."

Sabin replied, "The only reason to have the meeting last summer was to hold the building until the fall when the members could vote."

The question of whether to destroy the Willcox building had never come before the members despite petitions, an ASUO ballot and a letter sent by the entire Architecture and Arts faculty urging the Board to save the building."

Move Untimely

According to the Co-op letter, "this untimely move was not in the best interest of the membership," and so the Board refused to turn over the necessary membership list. As Sabin pointed out, it resulted that the meeting was not necessary anyway, as Orin K. Burrell, faculty Co-op Board member, stated that the architect had advised that construction on the proposed expansion could not begin until next spring and the Willcox building not have to be destroyed until then.

Attorneys, engaged by both sides, met and arranged that the Co-op Board should set up several committees and that Sabin should appoint a representative to each. This was done.

The Co-op letter stated that Sabin "refused to work with the plan and has shown an unwillingness to wait for the committee reports as previously agreed." Sabin said, "The committee on Possible Uses of the Willcox Building submitted a report to the press, with my name as a supporter of it. I wish in no way to be identified with this report (published in Monday's Emerald), as the estimates for restoration are far too low."

Eleven reasons why the new Co-op facility should be built on the site of the old Willcox building were listed in the letter.

The Co-op Board cited the expense and inconvenience of the present "two plant" operation — necessity of travel between the two locations, transferring inventory, additional personnel. It stated that more trade book space is needed.

According to the letter, "To meet City Building Codes and fire restrictions for the area, the Willcox building would have to be completely rebuilt of fire-resistant materials. The Willcox building by law, cannot be restored to its original state as materials used in initial construction do not comply with existing regulations."

Sabin Critical

Sabin criticized the Board for not mentioning possibilities of appeal to the Eugene City Council about variances. "In fact, the acting building superintendent told me last week that there would not even be a problem if the building had been properly maintained," he said.

The Co-op letter noted that the Board did not at any time consider using the Willcox building "because its general design would not provide sufficient space for immediate needs, and would not allow future expansion." The Willcox building would not allow addition of levels as space is required, but a new building would offer this flexibility.

The Co-op letter said restoration estimations exceed $250,000. Sabin responded, "This is an arbitrary figure, elaborately and delicately acquired by the Co-op Board," and he again noted that it does not take into consideration an appeal for "reasonable variance."

According to the Co-op letter, "no other property is available in the area." Sabin said, "I would not even bother to refute this since the official committee report states that other property is available. And what about the center of campus?"

Other Points

Other Co-op points are that the present bookstore was constructed with a knockdown wall and could easily be made part of the main building, that the 10 per cent student rebate would be affected if the cost of rebuilding and maintaining the Willcox building were undertaken, that there would be greater efficiency in service and management and rebate assurance with a new building.

It is also stated that the new Co-op would include a student operated center, member owned and controlled "for student relaxation, study, conversation and meetings."

Sabin called the points concerning the rebate "scandalous scare tactics to frighten the members into a decision to follow the Board." He said, "If they were interested in efficiency, and service, they would have actively sought a location central in the campus, such as at Oregon State University."

ASUO Group to Help With Student Charity

Students who wish to donate specific amounts of time to local charities may do so through the ASUO Service Projects committee.

Presidents of all living organizations now have both individual and group volunteer cards which may be completed and returned to the committee.

Off campus students should contact Mary Kae Ronnau at 344-7098 if they wish to participate.

A committee representing all on and off-campus living areas has been organized. The committee has access to all service organizations in Eugene and the volunteers needed by these groups, and has contacted the student body and all existing service groups.

Sixteen organizations, including the Red Cross, Tuberculosis Association, Pearl Buck School, Boy Scouts, and others have indicated their need for volunteer help.

Luvaas Heads

John Luvaas, chairman pro tempore of the committee, commented "Here is an excellent opportunity for any student who would like an activity for his school, community, or self, regardless of previous experience. No one will be refused this opportunity."

Students not contacted through their living organization may call Luvaas or any other committee member. Committee members are Jan Zwick, Ann McCallum, Gordie Zimmerman, Cathy Neville, Jim Abrams, Claudie Hollenbeck, Joe Holloway, and Mary Kae Ronnau.

Kelley In Race For Judge Post

Richard S. Kelley, associate professor of the School of Law, has announced his candidacy for Lane County Circuit Judge.

The judicial position he seeks is the new fourth position created by the Legislature last spring to take care of the county's great case load, which is the highest per district in the state.

Eugene attorney Edwin E. Allen is temporarily the judge. He was appointed by Governor Mark Hatfield to serve for one year beginning January 1. Allen also intends to run for the office.

William Fort, Edward Levy, and Roland Rodman are the three other judges.

Kelley stated he is running because he feels that a law teacher as a judge would offer the county "the opportunity to make use of the services of a person trained in depth of the law."

He commented that the trial judiciary candidate pool is restricted and excludes those who are trained in law but are not in practice. "The background of a lawyer is in winning cases. A law teacher understands the law as a composite of social order," he remarked.

Public Has Misconception

The public holds the misconception that teachers are impractical, according to Kelley, yet doctors who teach at medical schools also treat patients and are consulted on cases. Therefore, law teachers should be allowed to perform both as instructors and as public officials.

He also said that law teachers have been called to the appellate bench as advisors, which shows the Government's confidence in their ability to remedy trial judiciary.

Kelley was born in Lisbon Falls, Maine, where he graduated from high school. He attended the University of Michigan and received his Bachelor's Degree in 1942 and his law degree in 1948. He earned his graduate law degree from the University of California in 1952.

Worked for Bank

The candidate worked in the trust department of the National Bank of Commerce in Seattle and was a teacher of business administration at Oregon State University. He was a law professor at Creighton University law school in Omaha, Nebraska. In 1951 and 1952 he practiced law in Corvallis. Kelley has been a member of the UO faculty since 1958.

NSA . . .

dent Non-violent Co-ordinating Committee's (SNCC) efforts for equality in voting rights in the South, and encouraged member schools to donate to the SNCC voter registration drive either through the use of student government money, donation drives, or collection of food and clothes.

Charles Scattergood, according to a resolution introduced by the University of Washington delegation, was endorsed and supported by NSA as a SNCC representative. He will present monthly reports and propose guidelines for suggested direct regional action in civil rights matters.

Other Talks Heard

The delegates also heard talks by Tim Martin on CORE's activities in Seattle housing; Ernest Barth, a sociologist from the University of Washington, on the history of race relations in the United States; Charles Valentine on "Southern Apologists"; Bruce Gordon a SNCC field representative, on the policies of his group.

Jim Teasdale, a junior in political science who headed the delegation, said the value of the regional conference was the establishment of ties with other schools and their resources and ideas.

"As a group working on a project we can accomplish a lot," he said.

Civil Rights

He continued, "One of the roles of NSA is to bring issues such as civil rights to campus and make students sensible and more informed on these subjects."

"It was obvious from this conference that discrimination does exist," he said, "not only in employment but in other areas. NSA, working with CORE, SNCC, and NAACP can help promote the civil rights movement in strengthening its own organizations. The regional organization is a useful vehicle in this."

Interviews Set For Hostess Candidates

Candidates for Dads' Day hostess will be interviewed Tuesday night in the Student Union.
