

$14.7 Million Budget OKed For University Next Year

CORVALLIS (AP)—The 1964-65 budget approved by the state Board of Higher Education Tuesday indicates that the University will spend $14.7 million to educate 10,525 students, said John Merrifield, a board member from Portland.

The budget has Oregon State spending $16.4 million to educate 10,963 students and Portland State spending $5.5 million on 7,580 students.

Charles Holloway Jr., chairman of the board, urged support of the $30 million education bond issue which will appear on the May 15 ballot. "I know of no organized opposition to the bond plan and we have only to fight the possibility that apathy and ignorance could defeat it," he said.

Research Center

The board also approved plans for a graduate research center near Portland State College.

The board's plan calls for the center to be independent of Portland State at first. It might eventually become a part of the college.

The 1965 legislative session will be asked to provide money for the proposed center. Members of the board said it would require a considerable amount.

The proposed center would utilize graduate programs and staffs of the University of Oregon, Oregon State University and Portland State College. It also would use the staffs of the University of Oregon Medical and Dental schools and the Primate Center.

These staff members, and those from some private colleges, would be used on a part-time basis. The center would not grant degrees. Students would receive their degrees from universities and colleges already accredited.

Merrifield called for improvement of the undergraduate program at Portland State. He said Portland State already has almost as many students as either Oregon State or Oregon, but is not getting proportionate funds.

New EOC President

The board reported that three out-of-state educators had been interviewed as possible successors to Frank Bennet, who is retiring later this year as president of Eastern Oregon College. The three are George Feliz, San Francisco State College; Paul Waler, San Fernando Valley State College in California; and Averno Rempel, Purdue University.

Cal Tjader to Play in Music Show

After winging its way through such centers of culture as Carnegie Hall in New York, the Ford Caravan of Music will bring "A Folk and Jazz Wing Ding" to the University on Friday.

The program features Cal Tjader, The Modern Folk Quartet, Judy Henske, and Steve DePass.

Two shows of the Wing Ding are planned in the ballroom of the Student Union at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Tickets for the shows are on sale at the main desk of the Student Union and at Mattox Pipe Shop. Prices are $2.50 for reserved section and $2 for general admission.

The stars of the Wing Ding are all popular performers. Cal Tjader is a well-known vibraphonist who made his first appearance with the Dave Brubeck Trio.

He now leads his own small jazz group. Tjader, interested in rhythms, began investigating Afro-Cuban rhythms and has now developed a sound of his own.

Judy Henske started her career in California coffee houses before joining the Whiskyhill Singers and then becoming a single performer.

The Modern Folk Quartet is a West Coast group. The members are Cyrus Faryar, Tad Diltz, Jerry Yester, and Chip Douglas.

CAL TJADER, featured with the Modern Folk Quartet, will perform in the Student Union Friday evening.

N.S.F. Science Grant Awarded

An $11,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to a University professor will make possible the establishment of an astronomical research observatory in the Cascades for the second consecutive summer.

E. G. Ebbighausen, professor of physics, has announced that the site for the coming summer's research will be on U.S. Forest Service land two miles south of Sisters. The observatory was located on Cache Mountain last year.

Ebbighausen is searching for an ideal site for a permanent installation for summer astronomical observations, which includes accessibility by road and several months of clear weather.

Telescope Relocated

During the coming summer, a visiting astronomer, Gerold Kron of the Lick Observatory at the University of California, will be associated with Ebbighausen in his research.

The University's 15-inch telescope, normally located on top of the Science Building, will be moved to the summer location, along with various pieces of electronic equipment and a power generator for recording the observations.

Although astronomical observations have been made in Oregon for many years, last summer was the first time that fundamental research in astronomy was attempted.

Ebbighausen is hoping to demonstrate that such research is feasible in the state, particularly at high altitudes during the summer months. His chief research interest involves studying the brightness of stars, particularly binary stars which are eclipsed as they circle around each other.

Emerald Staff Meets Tonight

There will be another session on libel for all Emerald Staff members tonight in the Allen Room at 7 p.m.

The lawyer for the Register-Guard will speak.

Macbeth-Swahili? Its Being Planned

That's the plan. Archie Mbogho, a University graduate student from Kenya, is planning to translate Shakespeare's famous work into the East African language for presentation in the International Shakespeare Festival.

Mbogho, who teaches a class in Swahili Tuesday nights, is planning to use members of his class for the cast of his production.

Swahili is the language of Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, and Zanzibar, as well as the eastern area of the Congo.

Mbogho believes that this attempt to convert the bard's work into his native East African tongue may be the first time such a thing has been done.

Another attempt is being made to translate Shakespeare into Swahili, but it is done in Tanganyika itself. That country's president, Julius Nyerere, is translating Julius Caesar into his nation's language for presentation at their own National Shakespeare Festival scheduled for this July.

Chess Tournament

The University's Invitational Chess Tournament was not held "due to a mistake," according to the Student Union Games Committee.

The tournament will be held this weekend, May 2 and 3. All

Migratory Work Aids Peace Corps Plans

Working for the Migratory Labor project this summer would be an excellent way for someone interested in joining the Peace Corps to get training, according to Dan Dodd, chairman of the University Peace Corps Committee.

"The work in the migratory labor camps, home economics, sanitation, educating children, is almost identical to what the Peace Corps workers do," he explained.

One reason Dodd offered for the camps being good training is that they provide an opportunity for the student to learn "how to work with people under poor living conditions," a chance to help train and work with people of the lower classes.

In this way, the migratory labor work acquaints the student with problems in sanitation, common medical care and teaching children. This is patterned after the training program for Peace Corps volunteers, said Dodd.

Another way in which this work would prepare someone for the Peace Corps is that, because the work is under the same conditions only for a short time, the person could decide in one summer whether he really wanted to dedicate as much as two years of work to the Peace Corps under similar low cultural conditions.

ASUO Primary Vote Set Today

Bombarded by a flurry of last minute write-in campaigns, students will go to the polls today to cast ballots in the ASUO primary election.

Students may vote at the six polling places from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and must present their student body card when voting. Polls will be set up in front of the Student Union, the Chapman Hall co-op, the library, the tennis courts near Canson hall, Commonwealth hall, and on the sidewalk near Room 150 Science.

When the petitioning period for the election closed Wednesday, six offices were unopposed and two positions had attracted no candidates. By 5 p.m. Tuesday, seven students had filed petitions and posted bonds for write-in campaigns.

Names appearing on the official ballot include:

- ASUO president—Ron Cowin and John Luvaas.
- ASUO vice-president—Merritt Fink.
- Senior class president—Steve Munson, vice-president Joe Canberg, Dan Goff, and Bob Kennedy, and senior class rep. Joe Leahy.

• Sophomore class president—Steve McLaughlin, Randy Taylor, and Ward Beck; vice-president, Louis Abramson, Bob Colman, and Fred Ehlers, sophomore class rep., John Morrison.

• Co-op representative—Chuck Hillestad and Larry Haymes.

• Sorority representative—RaeAnn Engahl, Joan Traphagen and Jan Walker.

• Fraternity representative—William Hansell and Andy Jordan.

• Off-campus representative—Robert W. Gable and Jim Douglas.

• Senator-At-Large—Don Du Shane, Margaret Jessup, Bill Dames, Edward Landen, Steve

Write-in Petitions Deadline Thursday

The office of married student senate representative was not printed with copies of the official ASUO ballot in Monday's Emerald. To this date, no one has petitioned for the post.

Write-in votes may be cast during today's voting. Any student being nominated by a write-in campaign must file a petition and post his $15 bond in room 309 of the Student Union by 5 p.m. Thursday to be eligible to appear on the general election ballot.

Ashton, Dan Dodd, Bob Ricken-son, Warren Heinke, Dick Williams, Gene Williamson, Wally Kurihara, Mike Wooden, Larry Derr and Don Powell.

• Upper-class women's dorm representative—Sherry Lucas.

No one petitioned for the married students' position.

Linda Peterson has petitioned as a write-in candidate for ASUO vice-president. Dean Francisko-vich has filed as a write in for senator-at-large and Steve Walsh has filed for senior class president.

Thursday Deadline

Students who have not filed petitions and receive the necessary percentage of write-in votes on the primary ballot must file petitions and post their $15 bond in Room 309 of the SU by 5 p.m. Thursday.

ASUO Vice-President Merritt Fink, chairman of the elections board, said Tuesday that several candidates had not yet filed itemized campaign expense reports with him. He added that these reports were due at 10 a.m. Tuesday and that failure to file such reports constituted a campaign violation. The election board has the authority to impose fines or other sanctions for failure to comply with campaign rules.

Expense reports will also be due at 10 a.m. next Tuesday before the general election.

Rally Orientation Scheduled Today

An orientation assembly for students interested in trying out for the rally squad or yell duke positions will be held at 6:30 p.m. today in the Student Union.
