

Lane County Voters OK Community College

A new Oregon community college came into being in Lane County Monday.

Winning approval by voters with an almost 5-1 margin, the community college has neither a name, a budget, a campus, or a student body.

Of prime importance at present is the financial situation which must be solved by board members. A special budget election will be held some time in the spring.

Elected at the first board of directors were Dr. Albert Brauer of Florence from Zone 1; Dr. Clifford Matson of Junction City, Zone 2; Kenneth Schmidt, Springfield, of Zone 3; Dr. Dean Webb, Cottage Grove, from Zone 4; William Bristow, Jr., of Eugene, Zone 5; and Olga Freeman and Lyle Swetland, both of Eugene, at-large representatives. Francis Nickerson, University associate dean of students, was narrowly defeated in his bid for an at-large post.

Length of terms for the directors has not yet been decided. Two four-year terms, two three-year terms, two two-year terms, and a one-year term will be decided at the first meeting of the board by drawing lots. Following terms will be for four years.

7,226 voters cast their ballots in 22 polling places and 82 percent of them favored the community college proposal. Preliminary tally for the election was 5,944 for, 1,282 against.

"I thought it would be closer. People are backing this more than I thought," said Dale Parnell, Lane County Intermediate Education District Superintendent and a member of the college study committee.

Any meetings scheduled by the board will have to be unofficial until after the state board meets in December.

It is hoped that the new college will open its doors next fall with an enrollment of 1,000. The curriculum will be composed mainly of technical and vocational courses and will be housed temporarily in Eugene Technical-Vocational School buildings owned by the Eugene school district.

In the meantime, however, board members must thresh out the weighty problems concerning appointment of a community college president and the selection of a name for the college.

Poetry Congress Starts Anthology

The 1964-65 poetry anthology of the Inter-Collegiate Poetry Congress, comprised of poems submitted from colleges and universities all over the country, is now being prepared.

Selections will be based on poetic merit and chosen from schools throughout the country. Prizes to be awarded include $25 for first; and $15 and $10 for second and third, respectively. All poetry must be submitted no later than November 23.

If accepted, all future publishing rights are to be retained by the author. All contributors shall be notified of the editor's decision within two weeks of receipt of the poetry, and shall have an opportunity to obtain the complete anthology, to be printed by mid-December.

Entries may be submitted to: Inter-Collegiate Poetry Congress, 528 Market St., Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

Rep. Duncan Plans Informal Talks

Robert Duncan, United States representative, will speak to small, informal groups of students today.

He will discuss with the students any subjects they choose.

Duncan, who graduated from the University of Michigan Law School in 1958, entered politics in 1956 when he was elected state representative from the Medford area.

Duncan's schedule for today is:

Women's dorm—Carson Hall, 1:30 to 2 p.m.

Men's dorm—Spiller Hall, 2:10 to 2:40 p.m.

Fraternity—Kappa Sigma, 2:50 to 3:20 p.m.

Sorority—Alpha Chi Omega, 3:30 to 4 p.m.

Distinguished Awards . . .

their names are submitted to the Faculty Senate for approval. Upon approval, they are designated the award winners, and receive their awards on Charter Day.

Anyone who has viewed the sculpted ducks in the S.U. courtyard is familiar with at least one work of award-winner Tom Hardy.

Hoover . . .

to have resided in Oregon. He lived in Newberg during his boyhood and attended Pacific Academy, which is now George Fox College. Hoover also resided in Salem.

A Republican, Hoover was President from 1929 to 1932. During his term the Great Depression set in, and he never forgave Franklin Delano Roosevelt, his successor, for calling it the "Hoover depression."

As the years progressed, however, Hoover came to look at the depression years with a bit more humor.

Humor a Characteristic
Discussing depressions once, he said: "I should be regarded as an expert of these subjects. At least, I was credited with having constructed one, all by myself—the entire world depression which lasted in the United States from 1931 to 1941. I even had the honor of having that depression named after me by various political candidates."

With the humor that was a characteristic of Hoover after he mellowed, he replied to praise in this manner.

Work—Best Antidote
"Much overstatement has been made here today and it would take too much time to refer to all of it. But I'll simplify it for you by saying it's all true."

Hoover called "work" the "best antidote to ills and pills."

His range of public service spanned directing massive relief operations in World War I, food administration in the United States, a term as secretary of commerce, and then the presidency.

A boyhood friend of the former President said Tuesday night he had been invited to attend Hoover's funeral in New York City, according to Associated Press.

Burt Brown Barker, vice-president emeritus of the University, said he will leave Portland Wednesday. Barker will celebrate his 91st birthday Nov. 3.

He was a Sunday school classmate of Hoover at Salem. Barker said he corresponded with Hoover through the years and often visited the former president.

Faculty Member Makes Business Study

There are indications of growth and new retail opportunity in the San Francisco Bay trading area, with a trend toward concentration of sales in the larger stores, according to a study by Donald L. Thompson, assistant professor of marketing at the University of Oregon. The study was prepared under a grant by the Small Business Administration.

Thompson's report shows that retail sales in the Bay area's four major cities of San Francisco, Oakland, San Jose and Berkeley, will reach $3.29 billion by 1968, a 46 per cent increase over 1958.

Born in Redmond, Oregon, in 1921, he attended the University and received bachelor's and master's degrees.

A resident of Portland, Hardy is nationally known. He is currently installing one of his works in the new Los Angeles Music Center. His art has received numerous awards, and some of it can be seen in the Eugene courthouse.

Mechanism of Pain

Dr. Livingston has the distinction of being a pioneer in the study of the mechanism of pain.

After receiving his master's degree at the University, he attended Harvard Medical School, and returned with his M.D. to teach at the University Medical School.

Born in 1914, he served as a naval surgeon in World War II. He is now retired and lives on the Metolius River at Camp Sherman. He has written numerous articles and books, including "What is Pain?" published in the Scientific American.

Professor McKinley was born in 1889, received his bachelor's degree at the University of Washington in 1913, and his master's degree at the University of Wisconsin in 1916.

Since 1918 he has served as an instructor at Reed, excepting two years at Syracuse University in 1925-26.

Conservation

McKinley's forte is conservation, and it has been the subject of much of his writing, including Uncle Sam In The Northwest, a study of federal management in Northwest natural resources. He wrote the book on a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. He holds positions on several natural resource boards, and serves as a consultant to the Bonneville Power Administration.

University President Arthur S. Flemming will present the awards to these three men for their "outstanding contribution to the culture of Oregon" at the Charter Day ceremonies at 8 p.m. today in the Student Union Ballroom.
