

UO Professor Takes Part In Many Varied Activities

By PAM DEAN
Emerald Staff Writer

The University has a reputation of having an outstanding faculty made up of men and women who are recognized as being among the best in their fields. One such man is Sioma Kagan, professor of international business.

This is Kagan's sixth year at the University. Prior to this he was a successful international businessman. An extremely vital, active man, he is now, in addition to his teaching commitments, a speaker, a consultant to international business concerns and a world traveler.

On campus, he is a member of the University Committee on Assemblies, the Executive Committee on Foreign Students and is faculty advisor to the Associate International Etudiant Sciences, Economique, Commercial, an international student organization.

Kagan's academic activities are not limited to the University. He is a key member in unique education program for businessmen. It is known as the Executive Development program. It is sponsored by large companies and by the graduate business departments of several of the country's outstanding universities. Kagan is a faculty leader for the programs of Columbia University, the Prudential Insurance Company and the General Electric Corporation.

In business, the man who has reached the decision making stage, the point where his word goes, has been out of college for at least twenty years. The world of business has changed radically in the past decades. It is these conditions which have created the necessity for the executive Development Programs, according to Kagan.

This program re-educates the executive to the changing world in which he must work. The uniqueness of this program lies in the fact that the student will be able to use what they learn immediately. In a normal learning situation, as has been stated, twenty years or more pass before the student will put to use what he has learned in classes.

By this time his knowledge is obsolete. In this program alone, "out of all our educational endeavors, do we eliminate the time gap between the absorption of knowledge and its application in the decision making process," Kagan said.

Other countries, particularly in Latin America, are starting similar programs and Kagan has been active in these also. He has traveled to Argentina at the request of the Institute for the Development of Executives in Argentina. In 1962 he received a certificate of appreciation from the Council for International Progress in Management for his work in this field in Brazil.

This summer he was lecturing the Institute des Administracion Cientifica de las Empresas in Mexico City.

Kagan's function in these programs is to lecture on "the international environment in which a business functions." This includes the problems of emerging nations, the population explosion, the question of foreign aid and how America is to "hold its own in an age of competitive co-existence with the totalitarian alternative."

The list of activities of this extremely active man does not end here. He was recently keynote speaker at the national convention of the paper industry in Greenbriar, W. Va. He has also done extensive traveling throughout the world.

High School Press Meeting Scheduled

High school journalists from more than 100 high schools of the state are expected at the 38th annual Oregon High School Conference, to be held at the University Friday and Saturday.

Conference officials expect some 1,000 high school students to attend the two-day meeting. In 1963, the conference set a record with 1,133 students in attendance, making the Press Conference one of the largest professional meetings in the state for high school students.

Major speakers for the 1964 conference include:

J. W. Forrester, editor and publisher of the Pendleton East Oregonian and a member of the State Board of Higher Education, who will speak at the Friday luncheon. Title of his speech will be: "It's Still Important and Exciting."

Irving Lloyd, contributing editor for photography to Scholastic Editor and author of "Creative School Photography," will speak at an 11 a.m. general session Saturday. Earlier the same morning he will conduct a workshop for publications advisers. The title of his address will be "Photography and Layout: It's Time for a Change."

Prof. Max Wales of the University's School of Journalism, will give the address at the Friday night banquet. Wales, who recently returned from an assignment to Afghanistan, will tell of "Walking the Sands of Afghanistan."

Professional panels, section meetings, and roundtable discussions have been scheduled to examine the production of school yearbooks and newspapers, publications problems, and career opportunities in journalism.

Two exhibitions will be held in Eric Allen Hall during the conference—one of 1964 yearbooks, and the National High School Photo Exhibit by Eastman Kodak Co.

OSU Art Faculty Exhibits Works

An exhibition of works of art by members of the Oregon State University art faculty is currently on display throughout the SU.

The SU's permanent collection of Pacific Northwest art is currently on loan to the OSU Memorial Union, in exchange for the OSU faculty art show.

Sixteen paintings, including works by Nelson Sandgren, Demetrios Jameson and John Rock are on display in various rows of the SU. Two sculptures by Wayne Taysom are on display on the first floor, and a pottery display is exhibited in the main lobby on the first floor.

The exhibition will be on display in the SU through Nov. 2.

PERSONAL

HEY FITCHETT! JUST CHECKING

STUMP! If I only had two good legs—M.M.

I love a man in Van Heusen "417"!

You can tell he's important, ready to move up. That "V-Taper" fits and flatters his rugged, rangy physique, and the executive styling of traditional button-downs or crisp Snap-Tabs should take him to the top. Broadcloth or oxford, in all the greatest colors, oh man... that's the shirt for my man!
