Educational Opportunities Advocated for Negroes

Educators are taking a new look at the needs of Negro students and their colleges and have developed a number of programs to assist the educational development of both. Among them:

- Northwestern University is using a $150,000 grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education to recruit promising Negro students. The program will enroll 20 students for each of the next three years.

- Teams of admissions officers from 21 colleges in the New York metropolitan area will visit the city's high schools to help disadvantaged youngsters find their way into college. This program was announced by the National Scholarship Service and Fund for the Negro Students.

- Representatives of the American Society for Engineering Education, the University of Illinois, and the nation's seven predominantly Negro colleges of engineering have recently met to consider an expansion of educational opportunities for Negroes in engineering.

- Special grants to Negro students have been stepped up in medicine and dentistry.

- A committee for the development of art in Negro colleges has been founded under the direction of Albert Eisen, art historian at the University of Indiana, and Jack Jordan, chairman of the department of fine arts at Southern University.

- The Association of American Law Schools has created a minority groups project to counteract the factors which have permitted only a few Negroes and Puerto Ricans to enter the legal profession.

- The Office of Education is providing financial and technical support for college and university institutes at which teachers will be specifically trained involving educational problems related to desegregation. This aid is part of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

- The Office of Education has launched a program to assist colleges and universities in organizing special institutes for those who teach in schools largely populated by deprived youth and for training persons entering the teaching field. These institutions are part of the National Defense Education Act.

- Indiana University and Stillman College, a predominantly Negro liberal arts college of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, have just made a cooperative pact which includes exchange students, faculty, and curriculum experimentation.

- Similar agreements during the past year have included the University of Michigan and Tuskegee Institute, Brown University and Tougaloo College, Florida State University and Florida A and M, the University of Tennessee and Knoxville College, North Carolina College at Durham and North Carolina A. and T., the University of Wisconsin and Texas Southern University, and Cornell and Hampton Institute.

- Last summer 235 teachers from southern Negro colleges attended special institutes at Princeton, Indiana University, the University of North Carolina, the University of Wisconsin, and Carnegie Institute of Technology. This summer a larger number of teachers will attend ten such institutes. The institutes were part of the academic upgrading initiated by the late President Kennedy in a special White House meeting in June, 1963, and followed up by the American Council on Education.

These developments were all described by Whitney Young, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, in an address at the 20th National Conference on Higher Education.

In his address, Young went on to advocate many other special efforts to help Negroes in education. He urged the nearly 2,000 representatives of higher education at the conference to take the lead in clearing away race barriers.

Special counseling is needed to help the Negro freshman cope with college life, according to Young. He is "usually less well prepared than his white counterpart. His achievement may be at the 10th grade level."

Young cited a follow-up study of college records that indicated Negro students are likely to be better achievers than their aptitude tests predict. "Such tests tend to reflect not what they can learn but what they have learned," Young said.

Young suggested that "institutions who desire to be helpful" could "provide fellowship grants for college teachers in-service; recruit staff without regard to race, religion, or national origin; thus increasing professional incentive among Negro college faculty; establish staff arrangements with accredited schools in other sections of the country; and share staffing among small schools and engage in cooperative programming."

Scholarships Offered To Officer Trainees

Applications are now being accepted for the Army's new College Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) scholarship program which begins this fall.

Col. Embert A. Fossum, professor of military science at the University, has announced that the new program will provide financial assistance to 1,000 qualified students. Four-year awards will be given to 400 students and two-year scholarships will go to 600 young men.

The Army, under the authorization of the ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964, will pay students awarded the new scholarships $50 a month plus their tuition, textbooks and laboratory fees for attendance at colleges with four-year ROTC programs.

Payment of $50 a month will be made from the date the scholarships begin until graduation, to include summer months except for one six-week summer training camp where the student will be paid at the rate of $120.60 per month, plus transportation.

The four-year applicant must be between 17 and 21 on June 30, 1965. The two-year applicant must be under 23 on June 30, and must be a cadet in good standing in the second year of his Army ROTC training.

Applications must be made this month and postmarked no later than May 1. Students applying for the two-year scholarship program should contact Col. Fossum on the campus. Those applying for the four-year scholarship program should write: Commanding General, Sixth U.S. Army, Attn: AMAG-R, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif. 94129.

Beggs, Fobes...

ald staff since last fall term as an advertising salesman. He lives in Eugene with his wife, Jeanie.

"Responsible Tradition"

"I hope to continue the responsible tradition that has marked The Emerald during its 75 year history," Beggs said.

He continued: "I plan to continue a policy of background and depth reporting, and to expand this policy into the many untapped fields available for feature material."

"I am grateful for the opportunity to assume the editorship of The Emerald, recognizing that this position is one of the most rewarding and demanding offices available to a student at the University."

"Enlightening Experience"

Fobes said, "I am looking forward to another profitable year for The Emerald and feel that working with Chuck Beggs will be an enlightening experience."

"I hope to continue the fine work conducted by J. Craig Mathiesen, the present business manager, and Ken Kappel, advertising manager."

Two other contenders sought the editorship—Steve Green and Dave Jordan. They are both juniors in journalism.

Roy Ledgerwood was the only other candidate for business manager. He is also a junior in journalism.

Elementary Tests For Teachers

Elementary achievement tests for prospective student teachers will be given April 17, 9 to 12 a.m. 138 Education and April 20, 7 to 10 p.m., 130 Education.

Secondary speech test will be given April 15, 9 to 11 a.m. 104 Villard. Appointment should be made with the speech department.

Landlords...

"This will make sure they have an agreement ahead of time," he added.

"This should eliminate much of the hard feeling between tenants and landlords," he said.

Landlords also have the option of requiring a written agreement, according to Thorpe. "This provision should really help the landlords, too," he said "I'm certain they'll all accept it."

He said that if the people contacted by Student Affairs, who are not now on the list agree to the provisions and ask, they will be added to the approved housing list.

"This is in effect right now," Thorpe said. A landlord who does not agree to the new provision will be taken off the list immediately.
