

Committee Discusses Code Change for Vigil

By VIVIAN WILSON

University women residing in University housing units will be able to participate in the all-night protest against the war in Viet Nam this Friday without violating the Conduct Code, according to a new amendment to the Code.

The Student Conduct Committee Tuesday amended section III.3, closing hours for women's living organizations, to read "University-recognized function" as changed from "University-sponsored function."

The Code now states that "when women attend a University-recognized function that continues past the closing hour, they shall return to their living organization within 20 minutes after the activity has terminated." The all-night protest has been recognized by Arthur S. Flemming, University President.

Doesn't Sponsor

Wendell B. Basye, Committee Chairman, said that "the University doesn't actually sponsor any function; it can only recognize an activity."

Basye explained that the amendment was prompted by a previous interpretation of the Code for closing hours.

The Committee also amended the Code under section III.D., social activity eligibility, to deny the privileges of the University and related organizations from former students who have been expelled or suspended from the University for disciplinary reasons.

Denied Privileges

The Code formerly denied such privileges to students who had been disqualified for enrollment because of poor scholarship. This provision has been replaced by the amendment.

The new amendment also states that a University-related living organization will be held responsible for the conduct of non-students residing in that housing unit.

The non-student himself cannot be charged with violations of the Code. But if that non-student living in a University housing unit commits a Code violation, the living organization will be held responsible for his conduct.

No provision has been made by the amendment for the student in the Division of Continu-

Closing Hours Policy Protested

The University chapter of Young Republicans and the president of a local radio station have sent separate letters to members of the Oregon Legislature condemning the University's recent decision to allow coeds to stay out past closing hours to participate in Friday's all-night demonstration against the war in Viet Nam.

Marvin R. Steffins, Jr., president of KWFS, called the move "a lack of supervision and absence of using common sense . . .", according to a story by the Associated Press.

According to the AP story, Steffins demanded in a letter to the ing Education who is living in a University living organization but in no other way is connected with the University.

Francis Nickerson, associate dean of students, explained that this is because the State Board of Higher Education recently amended their administrative code to provide jurisdiction to maintain the discipline of these students by fining, suspending, or expelling them for violations of the Code.

In other business, the committee discussed criteria for minor court member appointments, and whether or not a student should be accountable for activities which take place in his room.

legislature that the policy of allowing the late hours be reversed by Friday and urged a full investigation of such policies at the University.

The YR action came in the form of a resolution at that group's meeting Tuesday night. Members voiced the objection that the decision did not set a precedent, a stand which dormitory officials had taken Monday in announcing the move.

Several members felt that it should either be a standing rule that hours be suspended for political activities of recognized groups, or else that no exception

ASUO Vote Set Today

Steve Goldschmidt and Tom Clark are still the only candidates listed for ASUO president and vice president, respectively, in the primaries today. Any write-in candidates who wish to run for any office must file their petitions by 5 p.m. Thursday.

ASUO senator-at large candidates whose names will appear on the ballots in today's primary election are Dean Franciskovich, Tom Jernstedt, Mike Donahue, Larry Beathe, J. Thomas Ayres, Henry Drummonds, Gene Sokolski, Hunter Jameson, Dean Chiotti, Patrick Lafferty and Robert Gable.

Candidates for senior class president are Dave Printz, Hugh Harris and Kenneth Settlemier. Candidates for senior class vice president are Van Keck and Alice Tsunenaga.

James Alone

Candidates for sophomore class president are John Ferguson and Tom Page. A write-in candidate for this position is Rob Bollay. The sophomore vice presidential candidate is Douglas Coate.

Scott Farleigh is running for sophomore class representative. Jim Beat and Michael Keenan are running for off-campus men's representative, and the candidate for off-campus married student representative is George Mace.

Co-Op Reprs

The candidate for men's co-op representative is Richard Beeson. For women's co-op representative, Karen Winn is the candidate.

The fraternity representative candidate is Kent Franklin. A write-in candidate for this position is John Folawn. No candidates have filed for the sorority representative.

The Emerald will hold an open editorial board meeting Thursday at 4 p.m. The board and any interested students will interview the candidates for ASUO president and vice-president.

These interviews will be televised on Private Line Three, and the meeting will begin at 3:45 p.m. in the television studios in Villard Hall.

At Platform

Steve Goldschmidt and Tom Clark, ASUO presidential and vice presidential candidates, spoke Tuesday from the Free Speech Platform at the University.

The chairman of the elections board resigned Monday because of her "commitment to Steve Goldschmidt's campaign" for student body president.

Holly Green resigned at the request of ASUO President John Luvaas. Miss Green agreed to resign because she had attended several of Goldschmidt's campaign meetings.

Pickets Slated By Committee For SU Vigil

The Ad-Hoc Committee to Stay in Viet Nam will picket the all-night demonstration against United States intervention in Viet Nam on April 23.

The group plans to picket the rally sponsored by the Student-Faculty Committee to Stop the War in Viet Nam which will be held in the Student Union Ballroom on April 23-24.

Bill McCarter, spokesman for the Ad-Hoc Committee, said Tuesday that the picketing will be conducted in the turn-around on the east side of the Student Union. The picketing will begin at 8 p.m. on Friday and will continue "until we decide to go home," according to McCarter.

Won't Stay All Night

He added that the pickets would not "stay all night."

"We are picketing because we don't want people to get the impression that the Student-Faculty Committee people are expressing the majority opinion of University students," McCarter said.

The theme of McCarter's group seems to be "Support Your Government." In other words, although there are various reasons for the U.S. to stay in Viet Nam, the student supporters of U.S. involvement in the war have banded together under this heading.

Different Reasons

McCarter emphasized that the group has received no sponsorship from any other groups and said that different students have different reasons for supporting the stand.

He did say that some members of the University Young Democrat and Young Republican clubs have signed up to participate in the picketing.

McCarter said he expected "at least 100" students to participate

Senate Passes Budget, Cuts NSA Appropriation

By PHIL SEMAS
Associate News Editor

The ASUO Senate Tuesday night approved its 1965-66 budget with only one change—a cut in the allotment for the National Student Association from $1,585 to $1,100.

That cut means that probably only two people—the campus NSA co-ordinator and the ASUO president—will be sent to the national NSA convention this summer. Last year the University sent six people and the budget Drummonds which would have said that the all-night protest planned for Friday by the Student-Faculty Committee to Stop the War in Viet Nam does not represent the opinion of all students at the University. The vote was 6-9.

But most of the three-hour meeting was devoted to discussion of the ASUO's budget and about two items in that budget, a proposed salary for the vice-president and the money allotted for NSA.

To $330

There were two attempts to lower the vice-president's salary from $520 per year to $330. The first, which also included giving the chairmen of the four standing Senate committee $50 per year, was defeated 2-12 with five abstentions. The second proposal, which only lowered the vice-president's salary, lost 7-8-2.

ASUO President John Luvaas defended the $520 salary, which is three-fourths of the president's, on the grounds that "if you give him (the vice-president) a one-third or one-half salary, then you will get a one-third or one-half job. The new constitution makes his job almost the same as that of the president."

Luvaas also told the Senate he was not pleased with the way the Senate was reviewing the budget, noting that it was only about one percent of the total budget to be reviewed by the Student Union and Educational Activities Budget. The total budget as approved by a 13-3 vote was $5,647.

Different Amendments

There were four different amendments proposed on the NSA question:

● Senator-at-large Mike Woodin moved to increase the allotment so that six delegates could be sent to convention. It was defeated 6-12-1.

● Graduate student representative Phil Lowthian moved to delete $1,000 from the appropriation making it $585. Several Senators objected that this would not allow any delegates to be sent to the convention. The motion failed 3-15-1.

● Senator-at-large Rick Williams moved to lower the allocation to $960, then changed his proposal to $809. This would have allowed one person to attend the conference. It also failed 13-3-3 after Senator-at-large Dean Fran-

Master Plan Report Boosts Local Colleges

By DAVE JORDAN

Emerald Associate Editor
Salem (Special)—A progress report on a master plan being drafted for Oregon post-high school education was released Tuesday, including recommendations on higher education administration, community colleges, tuition, and graduate facilities.

The report was submitted to the Governor's Education Coordinating Council by a special committee in charge of drafting the master plan. No action was taken in response to the report Tuesday, but it will be discussed at a meeting of the Council

May 3.

President John R. Howard of Lewis and Clark College, chairman of the master plan committee, presented the report to the Council. He indicated the report was "very preliminary," but said the completed master plan hopefully would be released in "about a year."

Want Unified System

The report gives detailed consideration to community colleges and coordination of administration of higher education in Oregon.

It recommends that a unified system of community colleges be established and administered by the State Board of Education, and that the colleges be at least partially financed by legislative appropriation.

"The state's interest, in the opinion of our committee, is unrepresented in the community college field at present," Howard said. "And we think that through the use of state money it would be."

The report also recommends: ● The state should make available, except where distance and sparsity of population make it impracticable, community college

The Senate also approved amendments to its by-laws which will establish a system of committees which will process virtually all legislation before it goes to the Senate. The vote was unanimous.

Budget Okayed

The budget for the International Education Center, a group which co-ordinates student travel and study abroad, was approved by the Senate unanimously.

And at the end of the meeting the Senate refused to amend the agenda and consider a proposal by Senator-at-large Henry
