 facilities within one hour's commuting distance of each high school graduate.

- Community colleges should develop strong and effective vocational - technical-terminal and adult education instructional programs.

- Community colleges should plan to provide one pupil station for each four high school graduates in the area served by the college.

- Lower-division collegiate courses completed in the community colleges should be accepted toward meeting the degree requirements of the state's four-year institutions.

- Tuition for community colleges should be less than that for four-year institutions.

- Community colleges should maintain admission requirements "consistent with the concept of an 'open-door' or 'opportunity' institution."

Support Bill

The report also advocates the passage of a bill now before the legislature which would officially authorize the Education Coordinating Council to act in an advisory capacity for the State Board of Education and the State Board of Higher Education.

The bill would give the Council power to advise and co-ordinate educational activities in Oregon, and to plan future educational development in the state.

Serving on the council would be 18 persons—four from public higher education, four from community colleges, three from private colleges and universities, one from private occupational schools, two from elementary and secondary schools, and four citizens-at-large appointed by the governor. The chairman would be one of the citizen members, and would be elected annually by the council.

Tuition Discussed

The master plan committee expressed a belief that tuition should be retained at Oregon public institutions of higher education, but Howard indicated it would like to see a reduction in the amount paid by out-of-state students.

"We believe the student should take some part in financing his education. In this matter we have not followed the California pattern," Howard said. Tuition at California's state institutions of higher education is nominal.

He continued, "On the undergraduate level we don't think the out-of-state student should have to pay more than 75 per cent over what the in-state student pays for tuition."

At present out-of-state students pay approximately 200 per cent more in tuition than in-state students—$300 a term to $110 a term.

The report called for a stepped-up program of financial aid—including scholarships, fee remissions, and work programs—"that will insure that tuition charges for post-high-school education will not deny to Oregon youth who can profit there from access to appropriate post-high school educational opportunities."

The present program of institutional specialization in certain fields of graduate education was endorsed by the committee. It also proposed that a series of privately-financed graduate research centers be established around the state.

Policy Protest . . .

should be made for this particular demonstration.

Another reason was set forth by one female member. She stated that experience in her own dorm showed that a large number of girls would use the demonstration as an excuse for other activities.

The resolution stated: "The University of Oregon Young Republicans hereby urge the administration of this institution to reconsider and revoke what can only be regarded as a highly irregular and unnecessary suspension of dormitory regulations in order to facilitate the demonstration this Friday by groups protesting our government's policy in Viet Nam."

"Furthermore, we hereby call on our state legislators to express official disapproval of this activity."

"We express our own praise and support for the efforts being carried out by the Ad Hoc Committee to Stay in Viet Nam to counteract the false impression of University opinion that those opposing our government's policy might give. We share their belief that the United States should stay in Viet Nam. We regret that the Oregon Republican College League Convention in Portland this weekend prevents our more active participation."

Copies of the resolution are being sent to Eugene's state legislators and to University President Arthur Flemming.

1. Hitting the books?

No, I was just thinking about what to give Sue. It's our anniversary.

2. You're not even married.

We've known each other three full weeks.

3. You give a gift every week?

We try to remember the important dates.

4. Isn't that overdoing it a bit?

Not when you're in love.

5. You'll be broke before you get to the altar.

Oh, we're very practical. Sue gave me a pocket pepper grinder and I gave her my B+ theme on Parental Attitudes Among the Arawak Indians.

6. If you really want to be practical, why don't you get a Living Insurance policy from Equitable—and give her security. That way, when you get married, you'll know that she and the kids will always be provided for if something should happen to you.

Swell idea. Now, what do you think she'd like for National Crab Apple Day?
