

Eames Chair

Chair Designer Speaks Tonight

Charles Eames, noted architect, designer and producer of documentary films, will give a public lecture at the University at 8 p.m. today in room 123 Science.

Eames, whose studios are in Venice, Calif., is designer of the well-known Eames chair, made of molded plywood, tubular steel and wire mesh. In 1960, he and his wife, Ray Kaiser, won the first $20,000 Kaufmann International Design Award for their over-all contribution to design.

Film Productions

As a movie maker, Eames has produced such films as "Toccata for Toy Trains," "Communications Primer," "The Information Machine," and a number of others. He also prepared the montage sequence for "The Spirit of St. Louis," 1957 Warner Brothers film.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., Eames was self-supporting at the age of ten. He attended, but did not graduate from, the University of Washington. Despite his lack of degree, Eames worked as an architect for a number of years.

In the late 1930's Eames was offered a fellowship at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan. It was there that he designed the chair that bears his name.

Designed Fair Exhibits

He has also had a hand in planning exhibitions, including the U.S. science exhibit in the House of Science at the Seattle World's Fair and the IBM exhibit at the 1964-65 New York World's Fair, in which he was assisted by the late architect Fero Saarinen.

Eames has been awarded honorary Doctor of Arts degrees from the Kansas City Art Institute, California College of Arts and Crafts, and the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, New York.

He is an Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Art, and received a television "Emmy" award for graphics of "Fabulous Fifties," produced by CBS-TV.

Additional awards include the American Institute of Designers Citation of Merit for Excellence in furniture design and the gold "Craftsmanship" medal from the American Institute of Architects.

THE MEN OF DeBusk Hall and the women of Carson five return to Carson early Saturday morning. The gals treated DeBusk to an early breakfast and entertainment consisting of a maypole dance, held appropriately on May 1. Joe Baker, riding high on the mattress, entertained the girls in return.

Campus Briefs

The field hockey club will meet at 4:45 p.m. today in the Gerlinger social room. Those interested in playing next year are urged to attend.
