

Journalism School History Published

A history of the University School of Journalism, written by a former dean of the school, has been published.

"Journalists in the Making" by George S. Turnbull was released today, under the imprint of the School of Journalism.

Turnbull, now an emeritus professor of journalism at the University, was on the faculty of the school for 31 years before his retirement in 1948. From 1944 to 1948 he served as dean of the school.

"Journalists in the Making" traces the story of the school from its organization as a one-man department in 1912 through its 50th Anniversary observances in 1962-63.

The first faculty member, brought to the campus in 1912 by University President P. L. Campbell, was a Seattle newspaperman, Eric W. Allen. Allen stayed on to head the school for 32 years, and the present School of Journalism building, Allen Hall, is named for him.

Turnbull himself came only five years after Allen, on a "temporary" appointment that was to last through three decades. He has known and worked with nearly all of the faculty members who have been at the school since its founding.

The 178-page book deals with the growth and development of the faculty, curriculum, and physical facilities of the school.

Turnbull is at work on a second volume that will be devoted largely to the stories of students who graduated from the school.

He began the writing of the history prior to the 50th anniversary year of the school, and its publication has been underwritten by gifts made by alumni and friends of the school during and since the anniversary year.

Viet Nam Speech Set for Tonight

David F. Aberle, professor of anthropology at the University, and Barry Barlow, graduate student in political science, will speak on Viet Nam in the Dad's Room, tonight at 7:30.

Aberle, who is chairman of the Faculty-Student Committee to Stop the War in Viet Nam, will speak on economic aspects of the two Viet Nams. Barlow, currently treasurer of the University's Young Democrats, will discuss political aspects of both regions.

After both principal speakers have made their addresses, there will be a general discussion, in which all are invited to participate.

The meeting is the first in a series of informational and educational talks and discussion-sessions which have been scheduled by the committee. Mrs. Kathleen Gough Aberle, who is director of this division of the committee's activities, has announced that meetings are also planned for the following two weeks, including one on the origins and character of the United States intervention in the Dominican Republic, and one on the Congolese situation since independence with special reference to United States policy.

Student Receives National Award

The National Council of Chi Delta Phi has awarded its annual prize for the best piece of writing appearing in the 1964 issues of its magazine to Rae Ann Engdahl, a member of the Beta Beta chapter at the University.

Miss Engdahl's prize-winning poem, which appeared in the winter, 1964, issue of "Literateur," was entitled "Interim." A prose work, "Sketch," also appeared in the same issue.

Miss Bernice M. Rise, Browning Room librarian and advisor to the University chapter which she founded in 1952, announced the award Wednesday. Miss Rise said that two other University graduates, Heidi Jones and Jean McBride, have won similar awards in the past seven years.

Miss Engdahl, a senior, received a $25 savings bond in recognition of her achievement. Her poem will be reprinted in the next issue of "Literateur."

Applications Due For '65 Degrees

Friday is the last day applications for degrees can be accepted by the registrar's office for the June 13, 1965 Commencement. This date will be enforced because of the many operations of checking, listing, and clearing which must follow. Applications for degrees received after the deadline will be forwarded to the August commencement.

All documents necessary for the awarding of a degree must be on file in the registrar's office by 5 p.m., June 11.

Any students who applied for previous commencements and did not receive degrees must re-apply.
