3 Frosh Enter On ROTC Grants

Two high school graduates from Oregon and one from Ohio will enter the University as freshmen this fall under four-year scholarships awarded by the U. S. Army.

Winners of the grants are Leon A. Dahl of Fairview, Oregon, Donald N. Gail of Goldhill, Oregon and John T. Davis of Brookville, Ohio.

They are among 400 high school graduates and 600 college students from throughout the country to receive scholarships authorized by the ROTC Vitalization Act signed by President Johnson last October.

These are the first such scholarships to be given students in the Army Officers Training Corps (ROTC).

Student Activities, Union Need $860,000 Budget

A great portion of the programs and service offered students at the University is financed and operated under the Student Union and Educational Activities Budget, a complex schedule of funding which reveals that nearly $860,000 will be spent this year in providing offerings ranging from bridge lessons to educational films to a cup of SU coffee.

About one-fourth of the budget's income, some $228,000 this year, comes from student fees, a portion of each student's tuition payment. About $20 per term of every student's tuition goes into University activities, such as athletics, towel fees, or the Student Health Service. The Student Union & Ed Act Budget now gets $6.50 of the $20 to operate on.

The Student Union is, in itself, a big business — $679,000 worth next year. The SU's biggest budget item is, as would be expected, foods, amounting to $351,000. In addition to food and recreation services offered by the SU, another $27,000 is spent on special programs such as assemblies, sponsoring the forensic team, the Eugene-University Civic Music Association concerts, University band and choral programs, and a Women's Recreation Association (WRA).

Many of the SU programs are sponsored by the Student Union Board. Its $38,000 budget provides for special attractions and exhibits as well as dancing, movies, talent shows, forum discussions and programs in eight sports activities.

Educational activities outside the SU are also financed by the SU & Ed Act Budget. The ASUO (student government) plans to spend $8,000 this year on activities including participation in the National Student Association, dissemination of information concerning issues in higher education, programs of the International Education Center and the annual Winter Carnival in Bend.

Also financed under the budget are the five student publications of the University, costing some $108,000. The publications are the Emerald, the Oregana, year book; Pigger's Guide, the student-faculty directory; Orienter, a magazine sent to freshmen; and Next, student literary magazine.

The SU & Educational Activities Budget is drawn up and voted upon by the SU & Ed Act Budget Board each spring term. The Board is composed of eight members, four students and four faculty, appointed by the president of the University.

Two Professors Win Book Award

A book written by two University professors and a Sarah Lawrence College professor has been announced one of the winners of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award for 1965.

Co-authors of the "The Rulers and the Ruled" are Robert E. Agger, professor of political science, and Daniel Goldrich, associate professor of political science, both of the University, and Dr. Bert E. Swanson, professor of political science at Sarah Lawrence College, New York.

Agger is currently on sabbatical leave to conduct a study of aspects of the British political system while stationed at the new University of Essex in England.

Swanson received his doctoral degree from the University in 1959.

The winning book is a comparison of the political systems of four United States communities and deals with power structures, sanctions and leadership ideologies. It was published in 1964 in New York by John Wiley.

"The Rulers and the Ruled" was selected to share the $1,000 1965 award with the book "Political Parties: A Behavioral Analysis" by Samuel J. Eldersveld.

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award was presented September 8, at the sixty-first annual meeting of the American Political Science Association, in Washington, D.C.
