Merit Pay Debated in Committee...

reasons for the nominations. The results will then be secretly compiled, and the selections will be made by a committee composed, usually, of faculty and students.

Officials said faculty concerns about the program were that the result may be just a popularity contest, that a professor's award may alter the chances of his getting a raise or promotion, and that too many arbitrary judgments were involved in the process.

For example, Jensen said that one difficulty at OSU was that checks would have to be installed in the selection to make sure that students in small professional schools, with small teaching staffs, have the same relative voice as students in the larger departments.

The OSU plan has attempted to solve this by having a selection committee for each school, with weight being given to number of eligible faculty and undergraduate hours determining the individual allocations of awards.

Awards Set for Winter

Elizabeth Johnson, committee chairman, said that it also "seemed unfair" that freshmen, who have had courses only one or two terms, were given the same voice as seniors. Only one school, Eastern Oregon College, allowed for this by permitting a student one nomination for each year he had spent on the campus.

Roy E. Lieuallen, chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, said that his staff had felt that most schools wanted to give the awards around February or March to encourage good teachers to stay at the institution. This would necessitate that the selections be made sometime after the end of fall term.

Another problem is that the Legislature specified no given amount for the individual awards. Miles Romney, vice-chancellor for academic affairs, said that the chancellor's office had concluded that awards should be in even thousands of dollars since the allocations to the individual schools were made on that basis.

Amounts specified for the other institutions are:

PSC, $50,000; EOC, $9,000; Oregon College of Education, $12,000; SOC, $18,000; and OTI, $3,000.

The committee concluded action by approving recommended guidelines for the development of the plans, as follows:

- Each institution shall develop its own plan.
- The plans must follow the rules and intent set forth by the Legislature's action.
- The awards will be $1,000 each.
- Each school will announce its awards in accordance with its own needs.

The committee's recommendations will now go to the full Board at its Oct. 25-26 meeting in Klamath Falls.

Besides Mrs. Johnson, J. W. Forrester, Jr., of Pendleton was the only other member of the three-member committee at the meeting. George Layman, Portland, was absent.

In other business, the committee recommended:

- that PSC be allowed to add two upper-division journalism courses to its regular curriculum in order that the school could provide offerings to qualify a student for a basic teaching certificate in journalism.

The committee reaffirmed its policy that only one state school should offer a degree program in journalism (the University), and that the other schools should provide a preprofessional course to allow transfers to the degree-granting institution after two years of college work.

- that OTI be permitted to begin a three-year program in electro-mechanical engineering technology, leading to a degree of Associate in Engineering. This would train a student for work on computers.

- that SOC be allowed to offer a certificate program in law enforcement beginning in fall, 1967. PSC was authorized earlier to begin a like program this year.
